

Intuition (Ceramic-12"x14"x10") Asa Zirps

See Glass

by Addy Eby

the earth is a collection of shattered glass everything we get to see the seeing we get to do is because of the light shone from the creases in the sky reflecting an image of these fractured, broken pieces of glass truly, nothing is a solid form but whizzing spinning atoms negativity charging forth, forming images now I understand that these particles are very very close more so glass woven than glass broken but why then if things are not made of one big particle can we not float our fingers through the surface of a mirror like water and sand.

what happens really when sand gets so hot it becomes an impenetrable solid piece of glass and why can't we walk through mirrors like we can see through windows