

Fashion FORWARD

Lizzy Hawkes

Samuel Larson is a sophomore who loves to layer. He creates his own style, rather than basing one off an influencer. He could be found in Target or scrolling through Amazon for a new look.

Katherine Stone is a junior who describes her style as either soft or indie. Her sense of style is influenced greatly by social media, where she finds inspirational outfits to put her own spin on. You can find her shopping at thrift stores, Von Maur or crocheting a new sweater.

Elise Kim is a senior who expresses her style with bold colors and loads of accessories. Pacsun, Zara and Garage are her must-stop places when in pursuit of a new outfit. She loves to scroll through Instagram and Pinterest and finds most of her inspiration comes from Asian influencers.

Cordelia Alpers is a sophomore who enjoys the music from rock stars and their favorite bands. Their style can be described as grunge and quirky. Thrifting, Ragstock and Depop are their favorite places to find their next look.

Sumaiya Kellum is a senior who describes her style as feminine but tomboyish. You can find her at Rue 21, Footloose or shopping online. Her go-to piece is anything that stands out to her and prepares her to take on the day.

Taryn Gerjets is a sophomore who finds their style inspiration from local songwriter Alisabeth Von Presley. They love thrifting and finding new accessories from Spencer's and Hot Topic to complement their next outfit. Their style is a mix of hyperfeminine and gothic high fashion.
