RAVES from the judges

// The Hawk exemplifies every element of a strong yearbook — copy, design, photography, voice and small details all converge to tell an engaging verbal and visual story of a specific school and its community.

// Outstanding opening copy leads readers into the story of the year.

// Lovely use of graphics, white space and photography in purposeful ways. A restrained color palette enhances the design and stays on trend.

The world gets it. Nothing is holding you back. You can BE whatever and whoever you want. And we know you do it better than the rest. So be prepared. Whether you're tackling the quarterback in the second straight state championship game, sleeping through your first period class or pirouetting across the Perot Stage in the "Nutcracker," we'll be watching. We'll watch as you crack a joke in Mrs. McInnis's class or nearly miss the midnight deadline on your English character analysis. Be ready because it's simple really. Everybody will be watching and taking notes as needed. While you are filling in YOUR blank.

In a chemically balanced dress her group made, Simeren Pokhrel walks down the run way during an art field trip at First Baptist Church. The groups collected "trash" and brought it with them to make a dress. "We all had a creative mindset for what we wanted. Most of us had brought materials from home because it was after Thanksgiving and we needed to get rid of a lot of scraps," she said. "A lot of groups started late and my group decided to start over on our idea so I was standing up for close to three hours." (LMaddox photo)

GLOWING in their neon outfits, the cheerleaders perform at the annual blackout pep rally. "I love blackout because it's the one pep rally where no one can tell if it's you dancing," Madison Allen (12) said. "I loved our music and getting to tumble in the dark. It was cool that this year everyone had the color-changing bracelets." (G Higgins)

The Vocalist: April McDowell (11)
"I was so in awe that in my first musical production I was one of the lead vocalists but it was really funny because my character was the complete opposite of how I really am."

The Trainer: Emily Hilton (12)
"I plan on pursuing sports medicine as a career, and the hands on experience has gotten me so many scholarships and offers from potential colleges."

ON STAGE in her final performance in The Nutcracker Ballet, Hallee Partin (10) does her Arabian pose as she dances across the stage at The Perot Theatre. "This was my favorite year of The Nutcracker because I was the Arabian Soloist. It's more of an acrobatic role, and personally I'm not a ballerina," Hallee said. "I knew I would have to put in a lot of work as the soloist, but since I enjoy doing tricks I didn't mind the extra practice." (G-Higgins)

BE

THIS WAS NOT A TEST.

And no, not a weather alert on your phone.

It wasn't a challenge. Or a triple dog dare.

Your life didn't depend on it.

Fill in the blank was an idea, a choice, an opportunity.

And guess what? You took advantage of it. You joined the robotics team just for fun and then made it to state. You signed up for one of Mrs. Stephanie Fincher's health science classes and got to job shadow every week in an emergency room. You were the first ever theater team to do the UIL set design competition and you ended up placing sixth in the state.

So this book is dedicated to you and all the ways you beat the odds, evolved, or simply got to choose who or what you want to BE.

ON THE day of the ground breaking of the new Pleasant Grove Elementary School, the Showstoppers and the cheerleaders perform at the city-wide event. "It was a big day because our district had been working for a much needed new elementary school for a long time. All the elementary school classes got to be there for the ceremony, and we got to take pictures where the new school will be in a couple of years. While we were there we got to do all of our stand dances and just get everyone a little more excited for the new school," Rachel Hemphill, (11) said. (G Pickelman)

YOU'VE HEARD IT ALL BEFORE.

If it doesn't challenge you, it won't change you.

You are only as strong as your weakest link.

Always beYOUtiful

Yeah, you've heard that all a thousand times. It's cheesy and oversaid. But you know that it's also true. Your BE won't limit you, so why should you?

These aren't stories of heroic feats, although some would say sending the first tennis mixed doubles team to state was just that. Or making back-to-back trips to the state football championship. Or going to New York to receive a national art award at Carnegie Hall.

This is simply about you.

And there's one thing you know by now. Filling in a blank isn't always as easy as it looks.

JUST FILL IN THE BLANK.

You discovered that there's no way to fill in your blank other than by just doing it.

Kristen Key packs her bags for Houston, Texas. A town she never wanted to go to, for a career she never wanted to do. Interior design, then architecture, finally to engineering. She never let her BE limit who or where she was going to be. Ever evolving. It all started her sophomore year in Mrs. Tiffany Horton's Interior design class. Then an Interior Design II class popped up. Then a Practicum of Interior Design was created just for her. She created her own BE. Now her ideas will forever be showcased in the new elementary school because she was one of the only students chosen to work with the design committee.

Lesson learned: let yourself BE who you want to BE.

Be Ready.

The school year came and went faster than you expected. But you knew that—you were living it. You were ready for your last breakfast date with your friends for senior year. You were prepared for the time that Mrs. Debbie Sutton called you in for a late night rehearsal for "Seussical the Musical." This may sound like old news, but you were ready. BE the new driver

Beginning to drive can be a nerve wracking experience for new drivers and their parents. Especially for sophomores like Connor Darron, who got in a wreck within eight days of driving. "When it happened I was really mad because it wasn't my fault, and the whole back of my car was totaled," Connor said. "Surprisingly my mom wasn't that mad at me. She was just worried if I was hurt or not."

For two months junior Zoe May did three things: sleep, binge watch "Grey's Anatomy" and go to the beach. By the end of July, binge watching was over and the beach was long gone. And sleep--well, that was not coming back any time soon. For students like Zoe, Aug. 13 came way too fast.

READY

Two weeks before school started, freshman drill team manager Landry Trammell was busy getting the drill team closets organized. "I was ready for school to start because I made so many new friends in drill team over the summer, and I was excited to see them in the hall," she said.

NOT READY

Meanwhile, senior Jackson Giles was still sleeping until noon somewhere on a lake when the calendar turned over to August. "I didn't want school to start because I liked to sleep in and not worry about school work," he said. "But it was easier for me to come back since it was my senior year."

READY

A week before school started, freshman Peyton Mathews was in the gym preparing for her first high school volleyball game. "I was really excited, but nervous at the same time," she said. "High school sports are a lot different than middle school sports, so I had to be prepared."

NOT READY

All summer, freshman Campbell Jackson was anxious for his first day of high school. "I wasn't ready for school to start because I didn't know what to expect," he said. "I'm the oldest, so I didn't have anyone to tell me what it was like."

But ready or not, the year started, and students walked through the doors on the first day. "I knew no matter what happened the first day of school, this year would be the best," senior Brett Walker said, "because it was my last year of high school."

ASHLYNN GONZALES (10)

can we get a RAIN CHECK?

When the weather got in the way of a Leadership tailgate party before the home game against Carthage, students moved the event to the Pittsburg game. "It rained every home game Friday night, so we had to just go ahead and have it," sponsor Tiffany Beck said. Even though it was misty and a little rainy, the tailgate went on as planned - with a few adjustments. "We even had some people from Gladewater come in and eat," Mrs. Beck said. "It was okay because we had plenty."

WHAT YOU WENT FOR:

When students, teachers and parents filled the gym the first week of school for the annual Watermelon Supper, they came to see friends, watch performances and see how teams would stack up.

For Linda Lee (9), a newbie Showstopper, it was her first year to perform at Watermelon Supper.

"I wasn't nervous even though it was my first time dancing on the drill team," she said. "I ate watermelon and took some cute pictures too."

PGTV staffer Hadyn Knight (11) went to shoot video for Hawk Nation News. "I'd never been to Watermelon Supper because I moved here in the spring," he said. "I didn't know what to expect."

Joseph Killeit (12) was there for another reason: his girlfriend Abby Calhoun wanted him to go.

"She wanted me to come so that I could take pictures of her and her friends," Joseph said. "I don't even really like watermelon—it's too gritty."

WHAT YOU STAYED FOR:

A surprise unveiled on the plaza. The actual watermelon. Snapchat-worthy pictures with friends.

As students and parents walked across the plaza into the gym, a big blue tarp draped over a mystery object stood to the side. During the pep rally, Coach Josh Gibson revealed that it was a monument to honor the "heart and soul" of the 2017 state champion football team.

"It's not just a monument," Connor Stanfill (11) said. "It represents all of the hard work that went into the season last year."

After what seemed like 10,000 pictures by the statue, it was finally time for the supposed star of the show: the watermelon.

"I waited in line for a long time for the watermelon," Blaise Nicholson (11) said, "but it was worth it because it was so juicy I got stains all over my shirt."

2. HOPING for a successful first day back to school, sophomores Ashlynn Gonzales and Zoe Smith meet up to take the stress away from starting a new school year without a sibling to tag along. "This is the first year in forever that my brother hasn't been here to take a picture, so I invited Ashlynn to come over so we could walk in together," Zoe said. (submitted photo)

3. FINISHING their last stop before school, George Douglas (11) and Sam Bradshaw (10) relax with donuts at Donut Cafe. "I like to have a nice breakfast before school because I think you can focus so much better on a full stomach than you can starving," Sam said. (LB Maddox)

RISE and SHINE
Morning is anything but routine when it's a school day

GRACE CROCKER
"I prefer to sleep as long as I can while still having enough time to get to school comfortably, so I normally wake up around 7:20 and leave at 7:45. Then I set out for the 25 minute drive ahead of me."

PHOEBE ROBERTSON
"I wake up at 5:10 for a 6:45 practice because I'm slow in the morning and it takes about 5 minutes to get to school going the speed limit, but if needed, I can be there in 3. I normally run into the gym at 6:43."

JACKSON HLAVINKA
"I normally end up sleeping straight through my alarm so I wake up very last minute. I always get to school around 8:17 because I have to rush around because I refuse to leave without breakfast."

LUKE MUELLER
"I get up around 5:15 for morning practice which gives me enough time to kind of wake up and get moving. Especially now that it's colder outside, it's harder to have motivation for practice."

we're BACK and we're TIRED

Surprise, surprise. Students get on the struggle bus on the first day

As alarm clocks rang to life on Aug. 13, all that students wanted to do was hit snooze, cover their heads with a pillow and slip back into a heavy slumber. Unfortunately, the first day of school did not wait for anyone.

Each and every student had the same agenda for the day. Wake up. Get ready. Go to school. Go home. It might have sounded easy, but waking up at 6:45 in the morning instead of 2 in the afternoon. Is. A. Struggle.

"I really did not sleep well the whole night before, so my first day was sort of a blur," Coe Blain (10) said. "I felt completely out of it all day. I was really just counting down the hours until I could be back home in my bed rapping it out."

And he was definitely not the only one who felt this way.

"I'd say that coming back to school this year was probably the hardest it's ever been for me," Kelsey Clark (9) said. "My sleep schedule had gotten so messed up over the summer and my body did not want to work with me. I laid in bed telling myself to get up for a few minutes until my mom had to drag me out. Needless to say, I was not happy about it."

But, while there were many students aching for their own hibernation, some agreed that the early bird gets the worm. And in this case, the worm was food.

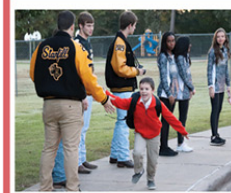

"I wake up pretty hungry, so the sooner I can drag myself out of bed, the faster I can get to Donut Cafe and tame the monster inside my stomach," George Douglas (11) said.

While every student had their own coping method for their first day, the final product stayed the same. We wake up, get ready, go to school and then go home.

We were back and beyond tired, but as the time passed, the early mornings became a little easier, the weather got a little colder and the donuts stayed as delicious as ever.

Football players get up early to greet younger students

"The kids got out of the car and we high-fived them and told them to have a happy Friday," Connor Stanfill (11) said. "It made me feel good to help out at the lower schools and build the kids up because they're our future." (GHiggins)

"It's always fun to help the kids out of their cars," Dillon Williams (12) said. "The smiles they give you when they get out help start my day off right." (GHiggins)

Senior 'queens' get their cars ready for their last first day

ABBY CALHOUN (12)

"At first, I was a little hesitant about painting my car because I knew there was a chance of rain, but I'm glad I did because even though everything we painted got washed away within minutes, the memories we all made will last forever." (LB Maddox)

HAILEY WHITTEN (12)

"The whole experience was a little stressful because it was really a race against time before the rain started to pour. Eventually, we all had to disperse and ended up at different places." (LB Maddox)

CATHERINE WRIGHT (12)

"Painting our cars was pretty chaotic because we spent so much time painting every little detail and then it started raining. I had to hurry and get my car in the garage so all my work didn't go to waste." (LB Maddox)

MADISON ALLEN (12)

"It was definitely a bittersweet experience because it was kind of our first last hoorah with everyone together and the rain kind of put a damper on things, but I still tried to make the best of it anyways." (LB Maddox)

all in a DAY'S WORK

For cheerleaders, their football routine lasted from early morning to Friday night lights

NOV. 15, 4:30 P.M.
Varsity cheerleaders load the bus to head to Paris High School for the first football playoff game against Dallas Roosevelt. As the bus pulls into Chicken Express in Paris, cheerleaders herd off the bus to get in line for their food. After running back to the bus so they can make it to the game on time, sophomore Meagan McGuire opens her sack and eats her food.
"I hate having to eat so quickly because it is so hard to eat on the bumpy bus," she said.
7:30 P.M.
Preparing for the football players to run out, the cheerleaders line up in front of the tunnel with the Showstoppers to sing the school song. As the football players fire out, sophomore Ella Nichols tumbles in front of them to get the game rolling.
"This is one of my favorite parts because doing a bunch of flips actually gives me energy and gets me excited for the game," Ella said.

9:00 P.M.
After fighting through the first half, it's halftime. The cheerleaders run to the concession stand quickly to get back in time to watch the band perform. Sitting on the track in front of the band, senior Kaylee Kelley watches the show.
"I know what they do takes a lot of their time and hard work, so I make sure to watch them perform every time," she said.
10:30 P.M.
As the game comes to an end, cheerleaders are pumped up after another Hawk win. When the buzzer sounds, the girls file in line to shake the hands of the players and other cheerleaders. To finish off the night, players, coaches and cheerleaders gather in front of the student section to sing the school song.
"This is by far the best part of the whole game," sophomore Alex Ouellette said, "just because we get to be together with everyone and celebrate the win."

1. SHOWING off their newly carved pumpkins, Kaylee Strawn (11) and Marshall Outbre (12) pose for a photo. "It was Marshall's idea to get together and carve pumpkins before our friends went off to college," Kaylee said. "I do body art regularly, and I thought it would be fun to do something different for Halloween. I wanted the design to look like a skull that was under stress and anxiety," she said. [Submitted] 3. PAINTING faces with different colors of chalk, Lauren Mugno (12) volunteers at the Williams Memorial Pumpkin Palooza. "Everyone in my youth group got to choose a different station to work," she said. "I chose the face painting booth because art is my passion and I thought it would be a good fit for me." FALLOWEENspirit

Students spent the season bundling up for cold weather, baking Thanksgiving treats, and playing with pumpkins

TIP 1: COMFY SEASON

Whether it was your favorite college sweatshirt or a trendy knitted sweater from Target, fall was the time to drag out your warm clothes and all things comfy. Quinn Addington (12) looked forward to fall so he could sport his favorite jacket.

"My typical fall outfit is a pair of Wrangler jeans, boots and a Patagonia Synchrony pullover," he said. "I think it's the best time for sweatshirts because it's not extremely cold where you have to wear big bulky stuff, but it's not so hot where you're sweating."

TIP 2: SPICE IT UP

Pumpkin Spice lattes. Cookies. Candles. Bread. Lotions. The list goes on. To truly have embraced the autumn season, buying everything pumpkin spice was a must. For Ashlynn Gonzales (10), checking the date Starbucks put their pumpkin spice drinks back on the menu was a priority. She looked forward to the day when she could drive through and get her favorite drink on the go.

"Before I go to watch a baseball or soccer game when the weather is super cold, I love to get a really hot pumpkin spice latte from Starbucks," she said. "It's the perfect fall drink."

TIP 3: WHIP IT UP IN THE KITCHEN

Friendsgiving: the best opportunity to have eaten all your favorite dishes of the season twice. During the break Lily Allison (11) invited all her friends to "friendsgiving" and told them to bring their favorite Thanksgiving dish.

"It was a great way to bring everyone together," she said. "I made pumpkin cupcakes, but it took me two hours because I put too much liquid in the batter and had to make them again. We took plenty of pictures afterwards, but the food was the highlight of the night."

TIP 4: POSE WITH THE PUMPKINS

Finding the perfect pumpkin was a necessity. Some went to Williams Memorial Pumpkin Patch to volunteer, or others like Zoe Smith (10) simply went to capture artsy pictures with their best friends. Visiting the pumpkin patch was a great way to do fall right.

"My friends Audrey, Dallas, and I went to a pumpkin patch event on the first day of fall," she said. "A lot of the pumpkins were ugly so we just picked up random ones. We posed a lot of different ways with the pumpkins and made up Instagram captions as we were editing our pictures."

"At first I was so nervous to ask him because I didn't know what to do or how to act, but I had so much fun at the dance and was worried for nothing," Lexi said. [submitted]

"Asking someone to Sadie is super nerve racking, especially if you are the girl. Even though Brett and I are really close friends I still felt the jitters," Holly said. [submitted]

Changing places, Sidestepers and Reverse Cheerleaders steal the show flip it and REVERSE IT

PRACTICE MAKES... IT BETTER?

Step kick. Ball change. Look to your left. Smile big. Catherine Wright (12) chanted at the boys in one of their many practices before the pep rally.

"It took a lot of patience out of me that week, and I was very nervous because we didn't start teaching the dance until that Wednesday, but they pulled it out somehow and did very good. I was also pretty impressed with their kicks," she said.

BURSTING AT THE SEAMS

One fact came out during the uniform fittings. Football jerseys do not fit the same as cheer uniforms, especially if you are a 6'3" tight end for the Hawk football team.

"It took me so long to find the biggest size," Landon said, "and even when I found it, it still was too small. All I was worried about was my wig falling off, but there was no complications there."

PUTTING LIPSTICK ON THE PLAYERS

It is safe to say that the bright red lipstick that the boy's used wore was not apart of their daily routines. It took a lot of time and makeup pallets to get their performance faces ready.

"It took so many make up wipes to get my lipstick off, and I still had to go to the football game that night with stained lips," Cage Watlington (12) said.

STEAL THE SHOW

Dillon Williams (12) is used to being in the spotlight to kick a football, but not necessarily when it was time to dance in front of all of his teammates and coaches.

"The reverse pep rally was probably the funniest thing out of the year other than actually playing the game," he said.

1. IN the gold captain's collar, Preston Allen (12) high kicks as he's introduced as captain. "I was really nervous because I was on the front row and I had no one in front of me to watch in case I forgot a step," he said. [GHiggins] 2. PRACTICING their kick line, the Sidestepers run through the dance routine during an afternoon practice. "The practices were fun because we are all friends so we just joked with each other while we were dancing," Brett Walker (12) said. [GHiggins] 3. ENTERTAINING the crowd, Dillon Williams (12) strikes a pose. "My favorite part of the reverse pep rally would have to be the team spirit and how everyone gets into the routine," he said. 4. HUDDLING up before the reverse pep rally, cheerleaders and Showstoppers hype up the crowd. "It was nice not having to stress about a performance and just getting to watch the boys perform," Kyla Priesen (11) said. [EBeck] 5. GETTING the final touch on his make up, Krishab Bashyal (11) transforms into one of the Sidestepers. "I never thought when I moved here I would be sitting in a chair wearing makeup with a bunch of guys I grew up with. It was so weird," he said. [GHiggins]

1. AFTER an intense playoff practice, Caleb Hemphill (12) and Miller Homsty (12) write meaningful letters to encourage and thank fellow teammates. "Showing gratitude is important to grow closer with each other," Miller said. "Writing was a great way to give back to fellow teammates because they work for you all year." [KDave] 2. CAUGHT in the spirit of a big win, the Hawks crowd around the Regional Champion trophy and celebrate their 56-28 victory. "Winning against Gilmore for the second time that season proved that we were a great team and had what it takes to make it all the way," Sergio Rodriguez (11) said. [GHiggins]

as good as their WORDS

Varsity Hawks pour 'heart and soul' into letters on their way to second consecutive state championship game

On the Friday night before the first round playoff game, senior Tyler Kelley walks into the locker room and puts in his headphones to listen to his pre-game music, ties up his cleats, and throws on his shoulder pads. Reaching inside his mailbox, he pulls out a letter and sits down to read.

Not what you'd expect in the minutes before a big game and not from a team that ended their season at AT&T Stadium in the 4A state Championship game. But for the defending champion Hawk football team, their season proved that something as simple as writing letters made a big impact.

"Reading a letter makes me feel pretty good because as guys we don't really show too many emotions," Tyler said. "When you get a letter where someone is pouring his heart out, it makes you realize that they don't just see you as a football player, but they love you as a brother."

As the team entered the playoff season, coach Josh Gibson asked the players to write three letters after practice each week. The recipients would be to different positions each week—for example, one might go to a coach, another to a underclassman, and the third to a person of their choice. A letter was written to the teammate that a player felt had a great game or improved that week. Players thanked coaches for everything they put into the program.

"The very first time we wrote letters I thought it was stupid and that no one was really going to care about it, but as we continued to write them everyone started to take pride in what they were writing," Brock Bingham (12) said. "I put my true feelings into the letters and wrote about the good times that I've had with a teammate."

Hawks cheer each other on all the way to the state game

Running off the field after stopping Quaro's offense, lineman Nick Martin (10) high fives quarterback Ben Harmon (11) as he makes his way to his position. "Being encouraged feels good in that you realize you're not just doing it for yourself—you're doing it for the team," Ben said. [GHiggins]

While taking a breather during the game against Chapel Hill, Bruce Garrett (11) hypes up his fellow teammates. "It feels great to get so much support from the community after everything I have worked for, so when I'm not in the game, I make sure to hype up the team," he said. [PPasonghong]

Hawks overcome expectations and take their nine-game winning streak to state

DELIVERING the WINS

The Hawks began their battle back to state with three big victories followed by a loss to Gladewater. After the first loss in over a year, the team then began to focus in on the details and used it as momentum for the rest of the season. At the end of the regular season, despite predictions that they wouldn't be able to repeat, they were district champions once again. As they headed to the playoffs, the letter writing began.

The tradition started the year before when Gibson decided to use the idea he had when teaching a Leadership Class earlier. He believed that if he could capture the team's heart, they would give him theirs.

"If I say we are going to be a close team, you have to foster and take the time to do those things to make us close," Gibson said. "I would have done anything for my dad. He was a coach and my hero so I believed that if I'd treat these kids like they are my sons, and they would treat each other like they are brothers, then they would do anything for the team."

After a 49-14 win over Iowa Park in the state semi-final game, the Hawks were headed to the championship for the second straight year.

The team came up short in the final game, but the scoreboard wasn't a reflection of their commitment to the game and each other.

"I feel that our main strength was just that we bonded well. We all get along really well—there's not one person or coach that you don't like. This gives you a lot more to play for and really helped us be successful," Ben Harmon (11) said.

Coach Gibson said it was the players' work ethic and belief that led them to victory. Not only did they walk away with a second trip to state, but they left with relationships that would last. In the end, it was the small things like writing letter what made the biggest difference on the field.

"Almost every kid will say that they love you which is a lot for guys," Gibson said. "I will continue to do these letters because it's just a great tool. I feel this causes there to be more fun and belief in each other."

4. THE ROAR of Hawk fans fills the ears of players taking the field in the area Playoff game against Waco Connelly. "Getting hyped before the start of the game is super important," Caleb Hemphill (12) said. "You need the energy from the crowd and players to carry your adrenaline through out the entire first half." [G Higgins] 5. STRIDING through a puddle, Jackson Cobb (11) completes a pass for a touchdown against Gilmore. Despite pouring rain the team finished with a score of 14-0. "I feel a lot of adrenaline when running the ball," Jackson said. "In that moment there's not anything more in the world that I want than to score for my team." [G Higgins] 6. READY for the snap, Brett Walker (12) positions himself to run down the field for an open pass during the Regional Quarterfinal game. "I don't get nervous when a pass play is called," Brett said. "The biggest thing for me is to visualize myself making the play." [C Joyce]

1. CELEBRATING their 49-14 victory against Iowa Park in the State Semi Final game, Blake Stale (11), Brock Bingham (12), and Nick Martin (10) huddle together. "It meant a lot because we proved everyone wrong," Nick said. "I knew that it was going to be a once in a lifetime experience." [G Higgins] 2. STRIDING for one more yard, Bruce Garret (11) slips through the hands of a Pittsburg player. "It feels amazing when I break through the defense because I know I'm guaranteed a touchdown for my team," he said. [G Pickleman] 3. WITH defensive players crowded around, Antonio Wakere (11) searches for a gap during the State-Semi Final against Iowa Park. "There was a lot of pressure playing at such a large stadium," he said. "I was excited because usually I don't get a lot of touches." [G Pickleman]

follow in their FOOTSTEPS

The JV team followed in the footsteps of varsity by finishing with a district record of 10-2. They started their season with a close game against Paris. The Hawks were ahead by one touchdown during the first quarter, but Paris fought back and tied the score at halftime. The Hawks ended up battling back and winning their first game of the season. "Being able to come together for our first game was really exciting and showed our potential for future games," Jaden Parker (10) said. "The team continued with a strong season and ended on a high note with a 42-0 win against Spring Hill."

Jayden Boyalkan (10)
"During a play I put all my focus into going after the person with the ball and making sure they don't pass me," he said. [E Beck]

Jayven Daniels (10)

always in ACTION

From the Friday Show to hype videos and the Sunscreen Police commercials, PGTV staffers stayed busy doing ... something

On one side of the table Andrea Rodriguez (12) and Holly Thornton (10) stack Girl Scout cookies on a platter for a package for the Friday Show. Preston Allen (12) walks up.

"Can I have one? I'm so hungry."
"No!" Andrea says.

With no cookies available, Preston sits down to brainstorm with Caleb Hemphill (12) for their next assignment.

Alex Murphy (10) walks through the door carrying a water jug in one hand and his glove in the other, which gives Caleb an idea:

"Hey, what if we did a package over the baseball team and their water jugs?"

"Yeah, we could interview the players and have them talk about the relationships they have with their gloves and why they carry water jugs around all day," Preston says. "That would be fun."

It's a typical day in PGTV. Staffers gather around the big table in the middle of the room. Some scribble on story boards, some scroll through their phones looking for story angles for their packages, and some get slightly off topic.

Sitting at the table, Chloe Carpenter (11) brings up one of the most popular shows at the moment.

"Did you see 'The Bachelor' last night? I knew it was going to be Cassie from the beginning of the show," she says.

Meanwhile, sophomores Kameyn Dennis and Olivia Kirk sit in front of the computer across the room editing bits and pieces of their package on softball.

"For our assignment, we put together a softball package that focused on how the girls' chemistry has grown throughout the season, by interviewing the players," Olivia says.

Kameyn explains, "This package was more enjoyable than others that we've done because we tried new things and used new angles."

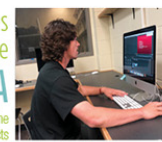

Caleb and Hadyn Knight (11) set up tripods in the studio getting ready for the show tomorrow. Alex walks in and sits down on the couch. The door opens and the next class walks toward the table.

"What are you guys doing?"
Lots of wandering, scribbling, scrolling, editing, and talking.

Someone calls out,
"Are there any cookies left?"
"Too late. Sorry."

the outside WORLD

Sometimes everyone needs a little bit of fresh air out of class.

ENGLISH

Climbing a fallen tree, Phoebe Robertson (11) walks around Bringle Lake finishing up her Walden Project for AP English. "I enjoyed the Walden project because I got to take some really cool pictures at Bringle. I also got to learn more about nature and how a philosopher thinks," she said. [KDavis]

MATH

Getting prepared to set the kite free, freshman Shelby Anderson and sophomore Shantel Aslam unravel their string and prepare for take off. "It really wasn't hard to get the kite up in the air, but some strategies we used was one of us would hold the spool and the other would throw the kite up in the air to let the wind catch it," Shelby said.

"When I go hammocking, I go to Old Bringle. I enjoy hammocking because it relaxes me after a long day and I just like to be in nature. I like to go with my friends to keep me company." Claire Gibson (10)

A TEAM EFFORT

No matter the project students found ways to contribute . . . or not

BE THE EGG DROPPER: What a bust! All the hard work, nerves, and excitement almost paid off. Emily Hilton (12) and her physics partner stare down in disbelief at their busted egg. "The hardest part for my partner and me was coming up with an initial design that would help keep the egg from busting after the six foot drop." Emily said "This project was fun and nerve racking at the same time because it was fun to finally be able to drop the egg, but nerve racking to see the end results to see if your egg survived the fall."

BE THE KITE FLYER: With the wind blowing just right, Freshman Clark Edmonds' kite flies high to look over the students of Pleasant Grove High School. "What was fun about this project was being able to be creative with the materials to build the kite," Clark Edmonds (9). "What made building my kite fun was being able to find a way to put Mrs. Haidets favorite super hero on the kite, Scale Ella," Clark said.

BE THE T-SHIRT MAKER: With a mind of creativity and artistic skills, Anil Pournouri (12) lets her artistic skills flow as she designs a custom made T-shirt for English. "This project was about the literary devices and my literary device was a motif. Which is a recurring subject or theme which is used in musical work or poems. My example I used for my T-shirt was Cinderella's step mom because it recurs over and over in Disney movies. Even though, this project was very time consuming and took a few hours. I was very happy with the end results even though the painting stuck to the cardboard."

1. BECOMING an expert at the Ruben Goldberg lesson Sophie Powell (11) teaches her class about the simple machines and shows the class how it works. "During this lesson I had to show the cause and effect. How one thing falls and it causes another thing to fall. Visually you could see the simple machines in our project because when you pulled the pulley down the cup fell down." [GHiggins]

2. OUTDOORS for a change, Zach Hughes (9), Ethan Kay (9), and Wilson Cheng (9) search the wooded area behind the school during a project in Mr. Thomas Strawn's Environmental Science class. [EBeck]

2. WITH only so many seconds to save a life, Claire Buttemeier (11) practices CPR in Mrs. Stephanie Fincher's class. "We were practicing how to do CPR on a dummy and we were learning how to do compressions and giving breaths to them," Claire said "We were practicing how to position our heads on top of their chests and how hard to press down on them. I enjoy doing it because it gives us practice on how to do it on a person in a real life situation." [CHarris]

3. AFTER dropping his egg project, Carter Brooks (12) surveys the damage. Students in Mrs. Lisa Watson's physics class, built a toothpick "crate" for a raw egg and then dropped it to test the effects of force, gravity and acceleration. "Our egg broke even though we thought that we did a great job on the building of the dropper. We were sure that it could survive the six feet drop," Eliud Cruz (12) said. "The hardest part about the project was the planning because we had to figure out a way to protect the egg. We were only allowed to use toothpicks and glue which made the design the most important part." [AYowell]

With early mornings and late nights, sometimes caffeine is a necessity

WILL TAYLOR (10)
"I buy Bang energy drinks to give me the energy I need to get through the day. My favorite flavors are Cotton Candy and Rainbow Unicorn because they are sweet and taste like candy." [EBeck]

DAWN to DUSK

For track athletes, their sport is an all-day event

On the way to the area track meet, Macy Adams (12) had a feeling it was going to rain, but after months of practicing discus she was ready for anything.

Ready for anything except non-stop rain all day. And mud.

"It was raining the majority of the bus ride there and still raining when we arrived," she said. "They pushed back the event times so we could throw, but the ring was still muddy so I knew it was going to be a hassle to keep the discus dry and our shoes dry."

Macy was one of nine Lady Hawks qualifying for Area along with Linton Colvin (12) who competed in the 400 meter run.

After stops and starts along with a few downpours, the meet went on in less than ideal circumstances.

"I had already accepted that I wasn't going to get first but I wanted to try and reach my personal best," Macy said. "I wasn't that upset due to the circumstances because to do my best, I knew it would have to be in good weather." Despite the rain, Grace Pickelman (12) qualified for regionals in the high jump and Jazmine Hever advanced in the 400 meter dash.

With no designated class period during the school day to practice, track athletes came in early and stayed late to get in shape for their events even though they were working on their own time.

"It was a struggle to wake myself up every morning," Kaitlyn Wells (10) said, "but I feel like it was more beneficial than doing it during the school day because we were only focused on track and more time went into track instead of other things."

With practice starting as the sun was coming up and meets lasting into the dark, athletes got used to the long hours.

"Waking up early and staying late is just part of the process," Bruce Garrett said. "If you want to get better, you have to show up and get something out of it."

DRESSED for success

Shielded by a blanket held by coach Amy Collins and Grace McDougal (11) and Sophia Tuttlebee (12), Dela Tuttlebee (10) changes clothes at the district track meet. "As we were leaving, coach Collins asked if Dela would let Jazmine Hever use her shorts to run the mile relay," Sophia said. "There's a rule in track for relays that if one person is wearing leggings, then the whole has to wear them. Everyone else was wearing shorts so she had to change fast especially since she was the first leg. Essentially Jazmine and Dela switched pants in the middle of the track meet so Jazmine was legal to run."

1. PUSHING to get to the finish line first, Linton Colvin (12) gains on his opponent to advance to area during the district track meet at Liberty-Eylau. "It was really important to me to advance as far as possible since I'm a senior, so I worked as hard as I could. I advanced to regionals in the 200 meter dash," he said. [PRobertson]

2. AFTER school beside the indoor facility, Justin Stewart (10) practices throwing to prepare for the district track meet at Liberty-Eylau. "I try to practice shot put as much as I can, so when I get to the meet it just feels like practice and there isn't so much pressure," Justin said. [CWatlington] 3. CALMLY checking her grip, Jazmine Thomas (11) goes through her pre-jump routine at the district meet. After competing in pole vault in her previous school, she joined the Lady Hawks' track team. [PRobertson] 4. CLEARING the bar, T'vondrick Henry (10) stays calm in order to place fourth in the district meet. This allowed him to advance to the area finals. "Everytime I jump at a meet, I take it one jump at a time. If I don't clear it on my first try, I don't let it stress me out because I know I have two more chances to get over the bar," T'vondrick said. [PRobertson]

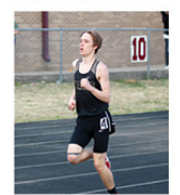

(CROSS)ING the finish line

Brooks Beck (9) "I do cross country all year long, so it really helps me stay calm and focused when it comes to track," he said. [PRobertson]

Lucas Edwards (10) "My strategy was to stay with the fourth place guy then pass him at the end so I could advance to area," he said. [PRobertson]

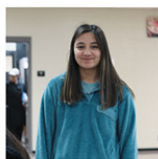

Carson Sanders (10) "I've run track since seventh grade, so I don't really get nervous anymore," he said. "Some meets have a little bit more pressure since I'm on varsity, but I handle it pretty well." [PRobertson]

QUICK CHANGE: 40 DEGREES TO 90 DEGREES.

With Texas weather constantly changing, students had different methods to keep warm and change fast.

Half of the school layered with a hoodie. "I like hoodies because I like to be able to cover my ears if it's really cold out," Laken Stivers (12) said.

The other half preferred the lightness of a sweatshirt. "I'd rather wear crewneck sweatshirts over hoodies because they are lightweight and much softer but they hold a nice warmth to them as well for colder days," Landry Bruner (10) said.

WITH makeup brushes and pallets, Maddie Horn (12) spends any her free time practicing her makeup skills and trying new tricks. "I have a lot of makeup pallets and they are all full of completely different colors," she said. "I like to get them all out and play with different looks."

a moment to SPARE

Through the busy-ness of the school year, students agree that doing nothing doesn't ever live up to expectations

What are you doing?"

It's a question asked almost every day by almost every student. Despite the homework and the sports practices and the work schedules, students still found a few minutes to kill time and do "nothing"

"Nothing" could be anything from hanging out with friends at Starbucks or spending half an hour in line at Chick-fil-A or doing hobbies like singing.

"I like to write and sing songs—a lot," Hannah Rankin (12) said. "I make YouTube videos because I want to put my music out there, but it's a lot of work to set up the camera and make sure the vocals are connected."

TV was also a good time killer—sometimes it was bingeing on Netflix series like "On My Block" or old shows like "Friends" and "Gilmore Girls." And then there was always stuff to do outside.

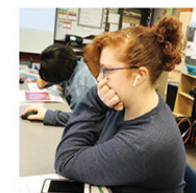

"Anytime I have a chance, I like to link up with some friends and put in work at the batting cages or the basketball courts," Dylan Hopkins (11) said.

Although they seem to always be doing nothing, there's always a little something going on along the way. Whether it was practicing makeup styles or athletic skills or doing homework or eating dinner, the end product was still the same.

So, what are you doing later? Not nothing. That's for sure.

they can't HEAR you

Bryde Roache (11)

"I don't personally have air pods, but I always take my boyfriend's whenever I leave my earbuds at home or if I ever just want to not worry about a long string hanging out of my ears. I do see myself investing in a pair soon because I've become quite accustomed to them," she said.

Abby Davidson (10)

"Air pods have really changed the game lately. It's a lot easier to workout with them since you don't have to worry about the long cords getting pulled out while you're on the treadmill or getting in the way of the book you're using to study," she said.

Ben Turner (10)

"I highly recommend air pods because they never fall out, and if you want to pause your music or movie that you're watching, you can tap the pod in your ear and it stops immediately. I think they're more efficient and easier to work with," he said.

WINGING it

When classes start piling on the work, students resort to sleeping now and studying later

Jackson Hlavinka (11)

"I don't study because I know there will be a review before the quiz or test and that is easier for me to absorb than doing homework at home by myself," he said.

Jacob Oliver (10)

"I hardly study because I'd rather learn the material the day of during the review than trying myself out by staying up all night studying," he said.

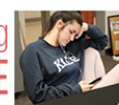

Harleigh O'Neal (9)

"I wing everything because I really have no time to study. My schedule goes from one thing to another so spending hours to study is unreasonable," she said.

Natalie Nicholson (10)

"I normally read over my notes once or twice and just hope for the best because over-studying takes forever and I feel like I'll start second guessing my answers," she said.

here's the RUN DOWN

EARLY MORNING:

While most students were still tucked away in bed asleep, Sophia Tuttlebee's (12) alarm was nearly buzzing off her night stand.

"It was a struggle to wake up at 6 everyday, but I always held myself accountable because it doesn't take long to lose your running shape," she said.

But she never had to be worried about being alone on the course.

"My friends are the main reason I come to practice. They make the running more fun," she said. "I don't regret running because I've learned so much."

DISTRICT CHAMPS:

Three months of training five days a week came down to one day. One place. One Chance. Coming out on top, the boys earned the district title at the Lake Bob Sandlin course, and the girls placed second. Lucas Edwards (10) had the best score for the boys and Katie Hutcherson (12) won the girls' race.

"Those practices were definitely really helpful leading up to the district meet because it was evident that we ran better as a team," Cade Haak (10) said.

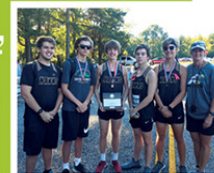

REGIONALS:

Next stop: regionals. Rain the night before made the course too slippery, forcing the teams to run an alternate course. With hills, tree roots, and branches all over the course, it was far from what the team had expected. One broken toe later, the team survived with the girls placing eighth and the boys 14th out of 30. Against the odds, Lydia Colvin (9) ran the race injured.

"Running with a broken toe was really difficult and painful, but I have such a passion for running I decided to go ahead and not sit out to watch," Lydia said.

MAKING a SCENE

Cast puts Cat in the Hat on stage with flashbacks

When Reagan Adams (12) was a little kid, she read all of the Dr. Seuss books. She knew Horton and Yertle the Turtle, the Grinch and Sam-I-Am, so when she took on the role of Thing 2 and stage manager for "Seussical: the Musical," she didn't have to do a lot of extra prep work.

"I read 'Cat in the Hat' to understand my character, but that didn't help me backstage," she said. "However it did make me feel like a kid again. I really felt like I was a little girl who could live in a world they grew up knowing."

To create that world, props had to be made and characters had to be developed. The cast and crew spent months putting the set together, and making sure the actors knew their characters and understood the story.

"During class we talked about Dr. Seuss books and how exactly it would be brought into the show," Alyssa Avard (10) said. "It definitely brought me back to my childhood because I read Dr. Seuss when I was little."

Putting Dr. Seuss on the stage wasn't just for the entertainment. It was to show how each story also presents a lesson in each story.

"I think the lesson behind this story is that it shouldn't matter what type of people you have to deal with," Rebecca Leary (12) said. "You shouldn't do anything to hurt them but instead make them feel happy and welcomed."

1. WITH a careful hold on the clover, Horton (DJ Whaley) protects the Whos that are residing on a speck of dust inside. Meanwhile, the Wickersham Brothers and the Bird Girls try to convince him that he's wasting his time. [SLam photo] 2. RUNNING onto the stage, Caroline Joyce (11) and middle school cast member Carlie Beck make their last appearance of the show for curtain call. "I enjoyed being a role model for the younger kids," Caroline said. "Our characters complimented each other well." [JThomas] 3. PERFORMING her role as "The Cat in the Hat," Addison Smith (12) plays an auctioneer trying to sell Horton to the audience. "It was a lot of pressure playing such an important role, especially since expectations were high, but I really enjoyed it and I feel like the audience did too," she said. [G Higgins] 4. CAREFULLY drilling a set piece, Rebecca Leary (12) helps build one of the set. Cast and crew members work together in order to get the huge number of props and set pieces finished. "We had to work quickly and diligently while putting everything together, but we had to do it carefully because of the tools we had to use," she said. [Thicks] 5. TO FLY FREE with no worries, Maylie played by April McDowell (10) tries to manipulate Horton into taking her eggs. "I felt entirely opposite of my character," she said. "She is really outgoing and shows off, and I am introverted." [G Higgins] 6. "OR THE THINGS you can think" finishes up the show with Jessica Colvin (10) and the cast, teaching the audience that it's okay to have a wild imagination and to be a thinker. "Really, though my favorite song was 'It's possible' because it was mostly eighth graders and little kids and I think it's something they'll actually remember," Jessica said. "I think they'll feel like they were a big part of the show. Also because there were bubbles in it." [SLam]

Caroline Joyce (11)

"We used so many different things to build the set, like pool noodles and a lot of tissue paper. When it was finished, it all came together nicely," she said.

Allison Wright (9)

"We knew building the set would take a while so everyone was pretty stressed about getting it finished. We worked pretty diligently though. I found all the crafting quite soothing," she said.

Alana Avard (12)

"We reused a lot of pieces and props from old shows we've done before. We would also search for anything that seemed useful around town," she said.

ONE more TIME

One Act Play cast takes on big show, big roles for competition season

Do what you know how to do!" shouts director Debby Sutton as Curtain Call Production's Encore company takes the stage for their UIL competition production, "Les Miserables."

And with that, the company began their show with DJ Whaley reciting his monologue as the lights faded in on the ensemble in motion.

When competing with such a well known script, the preparation was different than usual. With each cast member playing multiple roles, many elements were involved besides acting.

"I played Peasant 3 and was a member of the ensemble which really carries the show and is the backbone of any play," Jessica Colvin (11) said. "The hardest part of the preparation was loading in. We're a traveling show so we take all our costumes, props and set pieces with us so it was difficult."

The process began when the students had their first read through in December.

"The first time we read through the show, there was so much excitement and giddiness in the room, you could smell it," said Clay Jones (10). "My character, Javert, was such a dark person. I had to prepare in a more complex way, like more researching, methods to getting to that place in my head, and different thought processes than a usual role."

The company's next step was to learn choreography and blocking.

"Mrs. Sutton shared her vision with me, since she's the director, and from there I watched lots of videos from dance shows such as 'Dancing with the Stars' just to get my head in the right mindset. Then I had to come up with specific movement that matched the storyline. I had to think about the prisoners fighting for their lives and the guards brutally beating them, while still keeping the energy alive," choreography director Tiffany Beck said.

Even with all the preparation and caution in the world, illness can catch anyone.

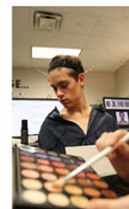

"One of the encore members, April McDowell, came down with the flu right before the area contest. So, Mrs. Sutton called a company meeting and later asked me to be a part of their team. I not only worked on the stage, but also helped out with makeup, hair, sewing, and whatever we needed so the show could go on," Lauren Stinard said.

The Encore company had to learn everything from sewing skirts to the counts of the final dance number in order to be fully equipped to handle a four-month journey.

"There's just this moment that you see in an actor, I call it the lightbulb moment, where everything clicks and you can see it from head to toe," Mrs. Sutton said. "That's why I still love what I do."

before the curtain OPENS

MAKE-UP
Besides emotional character development, each actor must transform outwardly to become their character. "Since I played Javert, an old, dark man, we had to experiment with colors and techniques to find the right style that made me like like he would," Clay Jones (10) said. [Thicks]

PRACTICE
The company traveled to Sulphur Springs to compete in their Bi-district competition and stopped at a Tulip farm along the way. "Not only did I get to do what I loved and perform one of my favorite scenes, the marketplace, I was surrounded by beauty too," Reganne Dumas said. [Joyce]

RUN THROUGH
After each scene was planned, blocked, and rehearsed, the company would do a run through, which consisted of the entire show without stopping. "When we finally got to complete a run through, it was pure magic. All the pieces and parts were coming together," Addie said. [Joyce]

Lady Hawks take a close game against Arkansas High, starting the season off with a big win

Woah, we're halfway there. Woah, livin' on a prayer. Take my hand, we'll make it I swear," senior Kristin Key belts out in the dugout.

Other Lady Hawk softball players chime in to the classic Bon Jovi song while they watch their teammates on the field during a cross-town rivalry game against Arkansas High.

"I started singing as a joke because we were all playing very tight and we thought we were going to lose," Kristin said. "I thought it would lighten the mood and loosen us up."

The game started out slow with both teams chasing each other on the scoreboard until the third inning when Arkansas High came in with four runs. The Lady Hawks saw that they were in for a rough night.

"There was a lot of pressure for the game because it was one of our first real games of the season and we are cross-town rivals with Arkansas High," Presley (11) said. "The nerves were very high during the beginning."

The game flew by with little excitement until the Lady Hawks came to the plate for their last at bat in the bottom of the seventh inning. The Lady Hawks were down 13-8 to the Lady Backs, but still fighting.

"The final inning was our turning point because we came in and started making contact with the ball and really finding holes in the outfield," Presley said. "We started to believe that we could actually pull off a win when we reached half of their score."

And that's when the singing began. As the runs began to add up, the dugout songs cheered on their teammates on the field. The Lady Hawks scored nine runs in the seventh to defeat Arkansas High, 14-13 with Lexi Snyder (9) hitting the winning run.

"I was kind of nervous because I'm just a freshman and this was our first game at home with a ton of people there," Lexi said. "But I just got in the box and tried to block everything out and hoped for the best."

1. AS the play ends, the infielders come together on the pitcher's mound during the March game against Liberty-Eylau. "I love batting, but I try not to think about anything else while I'm doing it so I won't get nervous," Zoe said. [Pashsong] 3. SPRINTING to first base after a hit, senior Hannah Snyder beats the throw in a home game with Liberty Eylau. "I take my running technique from track to speed up my steps around the bases," she said. "I love to pitch because as the pitcher, you are apart of every single play but that's also what is so nerve wracking," Maddie Horn (12) said.

THE OUTFIELDER

"The outfield is a completely different experience than anywhere else on the field but playing alongside other seniors really helped me be not so nervous about it," Natalie Nicholson (10) said.

THE CATCHER

"When I get on base I feel a rush of energy and excitement," Emily Hilton (12) said. "I know I have to stay on my feet because if there are any fly balls, I have to be ready to steal a base," she said.

it's a 24/7 thing

For 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and 365 days a year, life sped by whether students were in school or out.

Summer reading assignments clouded DC English students' time off—a novel, The Kite Runner.

"It was a pretty interesting book," Ryan Galvan (12) said. "I didn't think I was going to like it because summer readings usually don't interest me, but I kind of liked the book."

Long nights with no sleep was obvious as students hastily rushed into the building at 7:45. With a Starbucks Coffee in hand and wet hair from the shower, they try to learn the APUSH lesson that they have two quizzes over.

"Some nights I would stay up until 5 a.m. studying, then I would get an hour of sleep only to go to school and study some more," Phoebe Robertson (11) said.

After a long day in school, students flooded the parking lot trying not to get stuck in the after-school traffic as they rushed to their favorite fast food place to replace the lunch they forgot to pack.

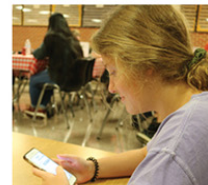

"After long practices, it was always nice to get a cold drink with my teammates. We usually went after practices and before our team meetings, so we could leave the school for a little while," Zoe May (11) said.

Just because the school day was over, it didn't mean students got a break. They went home with homework due at midnight and tutoring lessons to go to before dinner. "On Tuesday's, I didn't get done with school until 8:30 p.m.," Gracie McDougal (11) said. "I would go home do homework then go to tutoring."

PHONE 9 hours

The average teenager spends about nine hours on their phone a day, switching between Snapchat, Instagram, Netflix, etc. "A lot of time at school I get on my phone to finish homework. I'll get on Google Classroom or use it as a calculator," Della said. "I did a lot of sports marketing and algebra especially between classes on it."

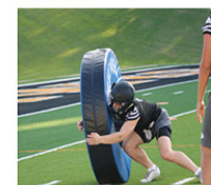

Della Tuttlebee (10) [Shoehn]

PRACTICE 3 hours

Participating in extracurricular meant practice. Practice before school and/or practice after school, it was the same whether it was performing groups or athletics. "Football has become something that's more than just a part of my life, so besides school, it's what I put the most time into," Bruce said.

Bruce Garnet (11) [Thicks]

STUDY 2 hours

The next two hours are spent studying for tests. If there are no tests, then study time rolls over into sleeping time. "I usually go a lot to Starbucks because we don't have any in my city in Spain," Carmen said. "Plus it's a great place to student with friends."

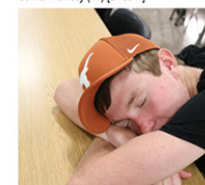

Carmen Marcos (10) and Palmy Pasanglong (11) [submitted]

SLEEP 6 hours

After studying, six hours are left to get the much needed beauty rest being a teenager requires. "School makes me tired and I don't have much time to sleep at home with all my homework and practice after school," Connor said. "I take advantage of any sleep time I can get."

Connor Hornsby (11) [Shoehn]

LEFTOVER 4 hours

The leftover four hours in a day go to hanging out with friends and eating. It's most likely both are happening at the same time. "I usually just eat my lunch throughout the day and do art during my actual lunch period because no one else I know is in the cafeteria," Avery said.

"It also helps that I get paid better than I would working another job. During the school year, I pick up kids and stay with them every single day after school. It's a great job."

2. SALESPERSON

"I picked up a job at Abby Gail's to work on the days when I would usually be sitting in my bed watching YouTube," Lauren Hughes (12) said. "I thought I might as well make some money with my time."

3. LIFEGUARD

"Lifeguarding is a great way to interact with all ages of kids and learn responsibility, whether it's managing my schedule or preventing a child from drowning," Caroline Joyce (11) said. "It's a great summer job because I can swim, be outside and work with kids."

4. STORE CLERK

"The best part about working at MetroPCS is the lack of work I have to do is sell phones and accessories which isn't hard at all. I applied at Metro because I wanted to earn my own money and save up for summer trips and maybe some spending money for college," Noni Hilley (12) said.

24 HOURS are not enough

Involved in lots of activities, students are hardly able to do it all, but manage to balance it somehow

Beep. Beep. Beep. Brett Walker's alarm sounds off at 5:45 a.m. he jumps out of bed, throws his clothes on and rushes to the high school for morning weights. He goes to all his classes but unlike most students when the last bell of the day rings he does not sprint to his car to leave. Football practice starts right after school and ends at 6:45 p.m. He then has to rush to eat dinner and make it to his 6:00 theatre rehearsals.

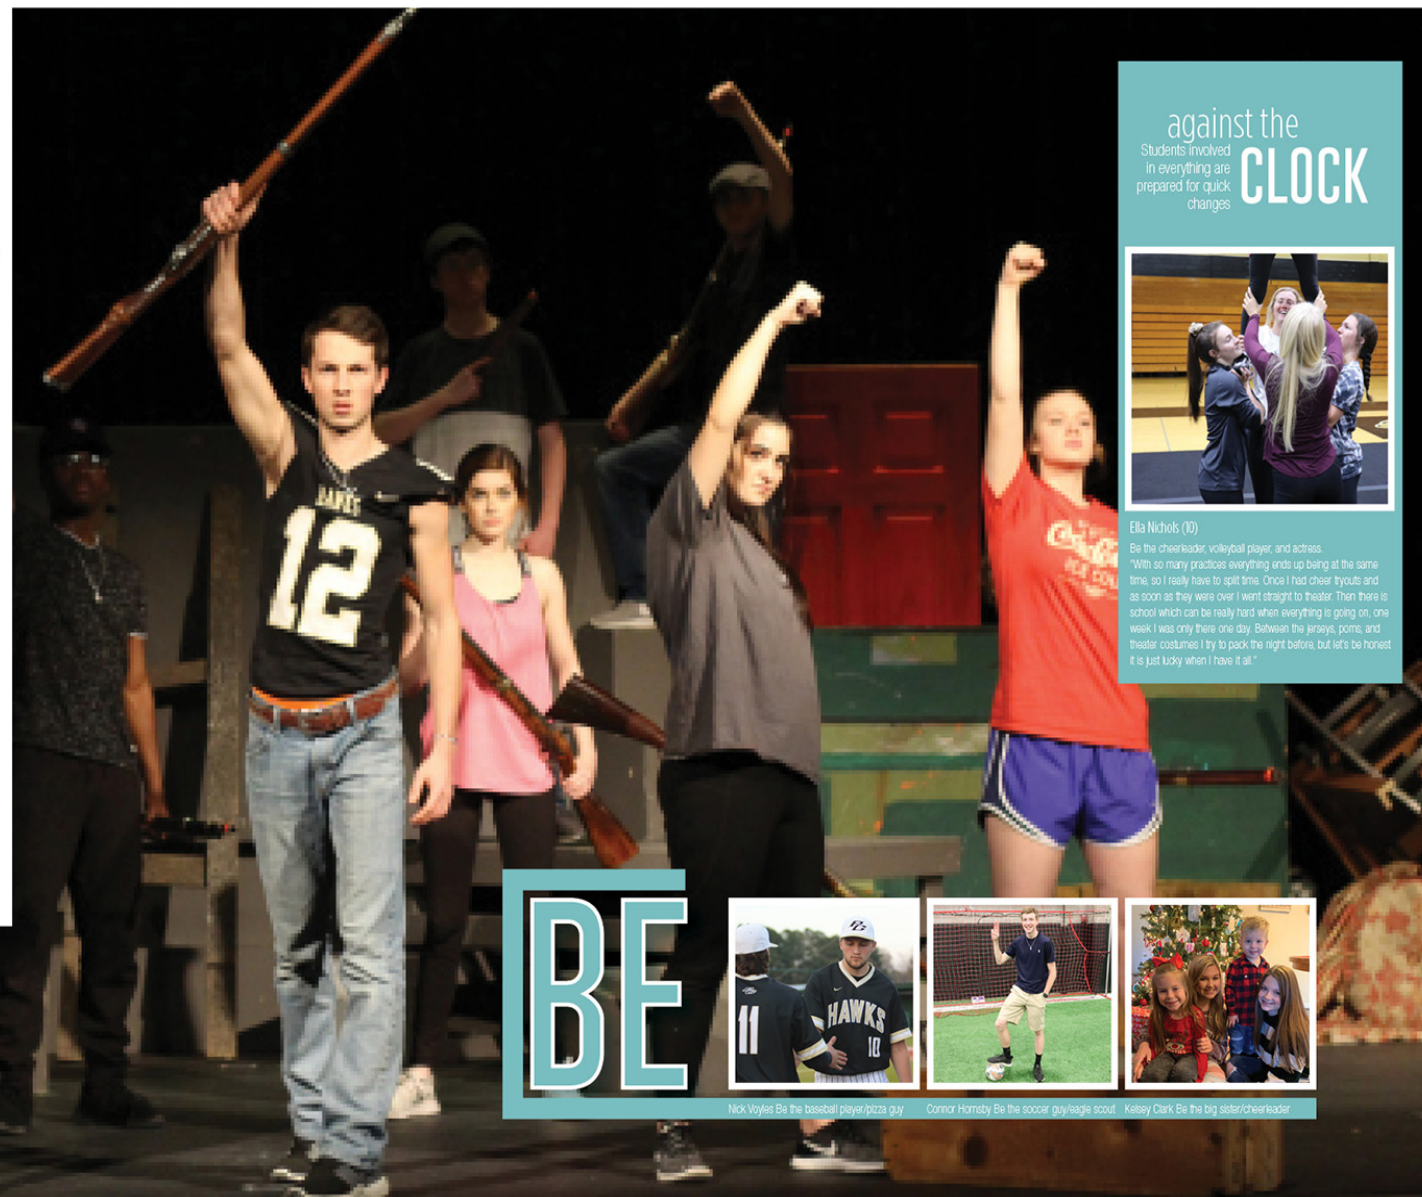

"The most stressful week was when football was in the playoffs and our musical was the next weekend. I had to take a shower at the school and sprint to the PAC to get ready for dress rehearsal without any warm up before," he said.

Brett was the only student who participates in both theatre and football, two of the most involved and time consuming programs. Football practiced every day in the summer with morning and night practices during the school year. It only got busier when theater started their weekend and evening rehearsal till 10 p.m.

"Being in both programs has taught me how to have a strong work ethic and do everything I can to get the work done," Brett said. "In football plays break down and things happen where you have to be able to think on your feet, and in theatre I have to do the same when things break or lines are missed."

With a packed schedule, Brett had with very few free days and nights without sleep. Food, his bed, and a warm shower were what he focused on some days, but it was the people that made all the crazy days worth it.

"When the practices are fun it makes the day go by fast. In theatre we laugh and joke around, and in football we always hype each other up," he said. "I'm going to miss the adrenaline from the crowds at both, but it is the people that I worked day and night with that will make the memories last."

POMS in hand, Hailey Whitten (12) makes the short walk down McKnight during the Homecoming Parade. "It was weird to be in front and in charge of the line since Catherine (Whitten) was on a float as a princess," Hailey said. "Even as a senior I've never been in front before." [Pashongong]

TWO of a kind

Homecoming week is in full swing, and the dress up days keep the students entertained during long school days. Disney Duce took over the halls to show their school spirit. "We had just watched the movie 'Monsters, Inc.', so we knew that was what we wanted to do," Kendall said.

"I loved walking down the field with my dad. It was very special to me because I don't see him a lot, so I'm glad we had this special fun moment together," said Maddie Horn (12). [G Higgins]

when the CROWN FITS

Before crowning the anticipation was high, but when the name was called the reactions were fit for a queen

THE FRIEND

"DJ and I were working at the front at a table for Seussical and had been going back and forth to see the game," Clay Jones (10) said. "We heard them start the announcements, and when they said Reagan's name we sprinted down the stairs and all the way across the bleachers. We were both screaming at the top because we were so proud of her," he said.

THE SISTER

"After she was crowned I sprinted to give her a big hug on the field," Chandra Adams (12) said. "I thought she was going to win, but I'm a little biased. I was happy for her because I knew she really wanted it because my mom and aunt won when they were in school."

THE PRINCESS

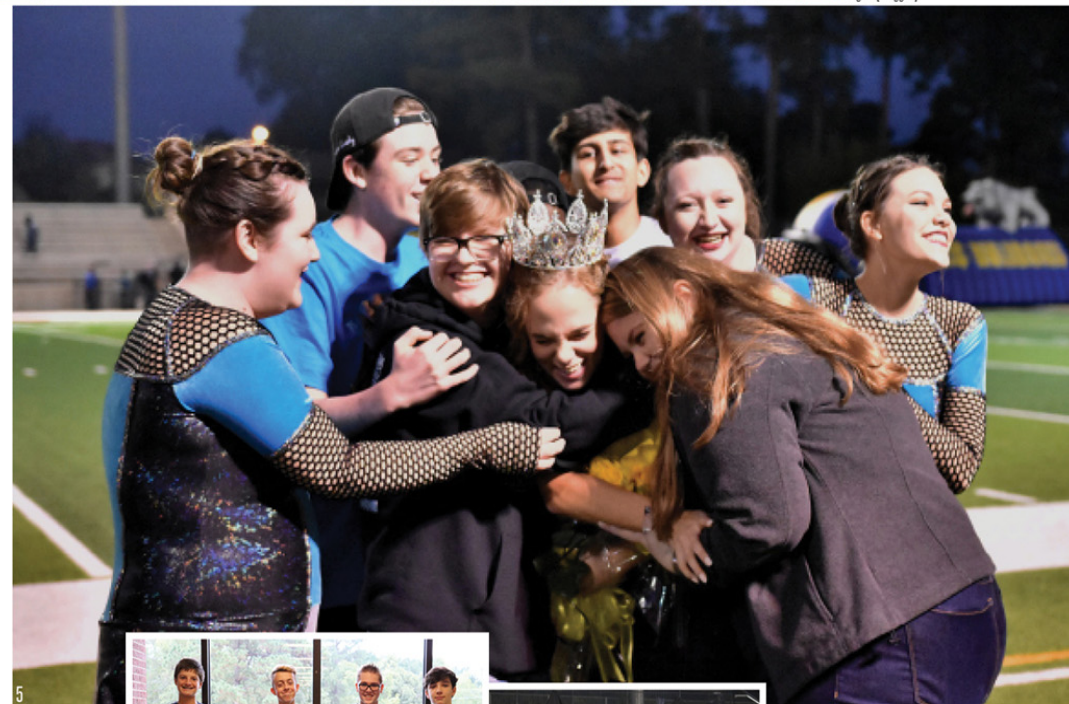

"I was really excited when Reagan got crowned," Catherine Wright (12) said. "The whole time I was waiting I was hoping it was her because there was no one more deserving on the homecoming court to get it. When her name was called, I was super glad she would be representing our school as the queen."

THE QUEEN

"In theater, I am usually a different character, but when I was on the field I had to just be me," Reagan Adams (12) said. "When everyone ran up and hug me after my name was announced I was really grateful for the opportunity I had to represent my school. It made me realize all the support I had around me."

2. POSED with flowers in her arms, Reagan Adams (12) waits for 2018 Queen Madeline Hask to finish pinning her crown. "I was so honored to be crowned by someone who I have always grown up with and thought of as a role model," Reagan said. [J Thomas] 3. TAKING it slow, Clay Jones (11) and Trinity Tuttle (11) dance in the middle of the floor at the homecoming dance. "A big group of us got in an area and we all danced together," Clay said. [P Pasonghong] 4. ALL lived up homecoming princesses Dawson Hatfield, Hannah Snyder, Sydney Hopkins, Lauren Hughes, Catherine Wright, Carleigh Scates and Maddie Horn and queen Reagan Adams pose together during the game. "It was a really fun experience to be with everyone at the game," Lauren said. "It's something I will never forget." [G Higgins]

5. OVERJOYED by Reagan Adams (12) being crowned Homecoming Queen, theater students rush to embrace her on the field. "I really wanted to be the first person, but it didn't work out. I ended up being in the back," Krieba Bashyal (11) said. [P Pasonghong] 6. GAME day ready, sophomores pose together in their black and gold attire. "I'm all about school spirit so I wore my button and hawk necklace," Holly Thornton said. [G Higgins] 7. LEADING the pack, homecoming princesses Hanna Snyder (12) runs the flags with Kaylee Kelley (12) and Grace Pickalman (12). "I had a lot of fun leading the flags, but it was very hard holding my dress and flag all at once," Hanna said. [G Higgins]

BE the Adviser of the Year

"I was happy that so many of my students were at the board meeting when JEA surprised me with the National Yearbook Adviser of the Year award. They were excited with me," adviser Charla Harris said.

1. DOUBLE checking that the page topics don't overlap, editor Mary Old spreads out the big lists the staff used to organize the coverage in the PGTV studio. We wanted to do a non-traditional book and we had to figure out what pages would have what topics on them," she said. "It took me about two months." [CHarris] 2. BUNDLED UP against the chill, photographer Gracie Higgins (12) and other staffers wait for the next club to line up for their yearbook photo on group picture day. [CHarris] 3. STANDING on the steps of the Columbia University Library, yearbook and newspaper staffers pose with the Gold Crown awards they received for the 2017-2018 publications. [submitted]

just a little bit DIFFERENT

Some pages made the staffers think twice as hard

EMMA BECK

"My hardest page was the boys' basketball page because their season went on for a long time and it was a double-page spread which meant I had to be more creative and to make sure the pages went together," she said.

MIKKI POPE

"I had about four pages that you would call weird. They gave me an opportunity to think outside the box and be more creative. The only downside is they took me a little longer to get completely done," she said.

KATIE FERGUSON

"I had two difficult pages which were soccer and volleyball. There were limited pictures. The pages took me longer to finish, but because of that, I was able to think more about my stories and sidebars," she said.

SHANNON LEE

"Golf and tennis were my most difficult pages to come up with stories and find pictures for. All of the pictures looked exactly alike because all of the mottos are similar. It was a headache," she said.

the unnecessary NECESSITIES

Newspaper and yearbook staffers have small tasks to do before they work to produce award-winning publications

FOR FOOD

If there is one thing that makes a staffer ready to work, it's food. And all of the staffers have become very good at finding all of Mrs. Charla Harris's hidden food.

"In order for me to work, I HAVE to be eating something. Whenever Mrs. Harris leaves the room, I would go through all of her drawers and look for her chocolate stash. It gets really bad when she is out of town because then I have all week to find her super hidden stashes," Cage Watlington (12) said.

PICKING THE RIGHT BAY

Newspaper bay. Yearbook bay. PGTV bay. All little offices for the staffs to work in. Each of them had a different quality to offer, so that left the staff between a rock and a hard place.

"When it comes to choosing which bay I 'work' in, it is never a hard choice for me. I simply choose the one with a meme of my awkward and make-upless seventh grade face on the door reading 'newspaper only,'" Sophia Tuttlebee (12) said. "The meme was originally made in attempt to reserve the newspaper bay for the newspaper staff, but after being constantly ignored, it was left for a good laugh. Which makes it fitting to the door of a bay because that's what happens most of the time along with lots of taking and lots of procrastinating."

TRY A LITTLE BIT HARDER

Just when everything on the page is perfect and it's ready to be sent to the plant, is when Spencer Richardson (11) hears the words "start over."

"After you find your angle for the story, do all the research and get all the quotes for a story, and just when you think you have created the best article in the world, the editors will tell you start all over again and get a 'better angle,'" he said.

From brainstorming to distributing the publication, Edge staffers made their deadlines making it to PRINT DAY

Hailey Hearn (12)

"Passing out newspapers is always pretty fun because you get to see people's first hand reaction to the paper we've spent the last six weeks working on," Hailey Hearn (12) said. [Gickelman]

Delanyne Keeney (10), Katie Hutcheson (12), Natalie Hale (12)

"Newspaper meetings are always neat because you never know what ideas people are going to share. It's all our ideas together that make up our paper, so you want them to be relevant and exciting," Delanyne Keeney (10) said. [GHiggins]

the icing ON THE CAKE

Clark Giles (12), Zoe May (11), Bre Jones (11)

"Cake days are some of the best days in journalism because everyone is in a good mood and the cake always tastes good," Zoe said. [CHarris]

Olivia Kirk (11), Kameron Dennis (10), Sophia Tuttlebee (12), Katie Hutcheson (12), Natalie Hale (12)

"I always forget that it is cake day. In a way, it makes it more fun because I get to be surprised whenever Mrs. Harris texts to remind us," Natalie said. [CHarris]

Alex Norton (10)

"I had made that cake once before and everyone loved it. Since I fed about 20 people, I figured I'd be good to make for the Journalism Christmas Party. It took me about four hours to bake and decorate it, but it turned out pretty good," she said. [CHarris]

state of the ART

Artists make and create for themselves, for competition and for exhibition

FOR CLASS

Working carefully, senior Ivy Mollen threads yarn strands to a bowl she created for a project in her sculpture class.

FOR EXHIBIT

Setting up for the art show, seniors Ryan Picklesman and Joseph Killett staple black fabric to cover the walls. "When we were setting up, we ran out of clips for the fabric so we started trying everything to hold it up," Ryan said. "We tried all different kinds of tape and pins so finally we resorted to using a stapler."

FOR YOU

Throwing on the wheel, Junior Grant Galtin makes a bowl for his room. "It's pretty calming to sit on the patio and just make different things that I could put around the house," he said.

"When I go hammocking, I go to Old Bringle. I enjoy hammocking because it relaxes me after a long day and I just like to be in nature. I like to go with my friends to keep me company." Claire Gibson (10)

1. STRIKING a pose at the 'Best Day Ever' fashion show, Hannah Rankin (12) fash herself for a dramatic gesture. "I loved the end result of my outfit, but the process was a bit rough," she said. "We started running out of supplies really early in the day so Presley (Hargrove) ended up finding some duct tape and just taped my torso really tight to give off a dress looking vibe." [LB Maccoo] 3. IN Art 1, freshmen Anna Elise Lindsey and Alysha McClure create a mask using plaster, vaseline and water. "I'm not a huge fan of things touching my face, so that was something I had to adjust to. It was hard keeping something on my face and having my eyes closed for that long, but I was pleased with the ending result." Ann Elise (9) said. [EBack] 4. SETTING up for the art show, seniors Ryan Picklesman and Joseph Killett staple black fabric to cover the walls. "When we were setting up, we ran out of clips for the fabric so we started trying everything to hold it up," Ryan said. "We tried all different kinds of tape and pins so finally we resorted to using a stapler." [PPassinghough]

4. TO spunk up her blind contour drawing, Leah Fowler (9) shows her creativity with glasses and a headpiece made of yarn and pipe cleaners. "I thought I was going to be more embarrassed but I saw everyone else had silly stuff all over them, too so then it wasn't so bad," she said. [LB Meddow]

It's all about THE PROCESS

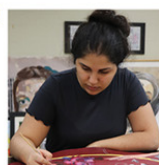

For AP students, each step is important when creating a unique AP project

MADISON BRANNON (12)
"Plan, plan, plan. Thumbnails are vital when preparing for a project because you can really lay out all of your ideas and see what works best."

MAGGIE WATLINGTON (12)
"I would say gather everything you think you could use and even some items you wouldn't think of using end up really cool."

ANIL POURNORI (12)
"In AP, there are a lot of deadlines that you have to meet so managing your time is very important because time really gets away from you easily."

oh, the places TO GO

The art room holds access to so many places all within a small space and each place has a different purpose.

THE BOX ROOM: This room is where all of the art work you are working on, have worked on, and will work on in the future lays to rest until the next time you return to class. Here you keep your current materials and hope they don't roll into the back and be lost forever.

THE RESEARCH ROOM: This is the home of all of the research computers where Pinterest is a home screen favorite and the printer runs out of ink weekly while looking for project inspiration.

THE AP ROOM: While passing this room, you may hear cries of help, whole hearted laughs, and maybe a few forks scraping a plastic container. This is the temporary home of stressing seniors and all extra food from the art show.

THE CLASSROOM: Where four things are happening at once. Where all of the winging of projects happen. Where the best talks and friendships are made.

THE BACK CLOSET: The room where we keep absolutely everything. From glue guns to skeletons, to scissors and boxes of bones. This is where there is a place for everything, just not everything is in its place.

THE BACK PATIO: On a beautiful spring day, the picnic tables are a huge hit for getting work done or eating lunch. This is also where the clay bowls, pots and coffee mugs are thrown on the spinning wheel.

THE ART HOSPITAL: And last but not least, the chair of personal therapy. If you're having an off day, here is where you can come to express your strongest feelings, discuss your future plans and finally get your life back on track with the help of Mrs. Brisco and Mrs. Manning.

// The Hawk Pleasant Grove High School Texarkana, Texas

THE CARRIER: Grumpy. Dopey. Sleepy. Bashful. Happy. Sneezzy. Doc. As one of the Sports Medicine Dwarfs, Matthew Teague (12) helped carry Dawson Hatfield's (12) Snow White float for the homecoming pep rally.

"Our strategy for carrying Dawson was to get the spine board from sports medicine because we are all in that class," Matthew said. "We had to practice because we didn't want to risk dropping her."

THE PRINCESS: With the help of her fairy godmother, Grace Pickelman (12) made her many outfit changes successfully.

"It was a struggle having to get ready so many times on Friday, having to wear two dresses and having an outfit for the parade. There was just so much stuff I had to do, so extra," she said. "I had to help make a float for the pep rally and I was supposed to dress up for that, too, but Kaylee and I couldn't because we had a volleyball game right after the pep rally."

THE ESCORT: Clarke Giles (12) only had one job for the night. Borrow the car and show up with it on time for the Monday night parade to escort senior princess Lauren Hughes (12).

"My favorite part about homecoming was definitely driving the Camaro back from Ashdown and riding in it for the parade," Clark said, "and then walking in front of everybody on the field afterward looking like a boss."

THE CLUB SPONSOR: No glitter. That was the only request Mrs. Stephanie Knowles had when she signed up to be Dawson Hatfield's (12) club sponsor. So the only sparkle was Dawson's smile.

"First, I brainstormed with Mrs. Fincher, Mrs. Horton, and Mrs. Scott. We talked about what we wanted the float to look like. Next, I passed it on to Mrs. Fincher to do the glitter work because I refuse to mess with glitter, which is the evil of the art world," Mrs. Knowles said. "I am not interested in having anything to do with that. After that she sent it back to me and we finished up."

1. ON THE parade route down McKnight, seniors Kaylee Kelley and Seth Hopkins (12) ride on a bright red convertible. "I've watched them do the parade for the last three years and I always hoped I would get to," Kaylee said. "I always wanted to be a princess as a kid." [HKnight] 2. DRESSED as dalmatians from "101 Dalmatians," the cheerleaders ride and walk alongside their float, waving to the crowd. "We had to cut out all of our little dots that went on the shirts and ordered the ears headbands," McKinley Macbride (9) said. [HKnight] 3. DRIVING a decorated golf cart in front of the cheerleader float, principals Mendi Sharp and Todd Marshall play the roles of Cruella de Vil and Horace Badum from "101 Dalmatians." "This was the second time I've ridden in a homecoming parade," Mr. Marshall said. "The other time I was in high school and I was homecoming king. This was just as fun." [HKnight] 4. WITH his wrapped around their heads, Kaylee members Allison Jones (12) and Rachael Leach (11) carry Maddie Horns (12) "Moana" float across the gym floor. "We went to Maddie's house the night before the pep rally to build the float," Allison said. [EBeck]

running the COLORS

"My favorite part is that you get to be the hype squad for the football team and the first thing you run out of the tunnel. You set the mood for the game," Noah Fawcush (12) said. [Higgins]

"Being a flag runner is a lot of fun to me because you get to be close to all of the action and just being able to pump up the players before we all run out together," Jackson Giles (12) said.

"I became a flag runner because I played football my freshman year but I had an injury. Being a flag runner gives me a little bump seeing everyone getting pumped for the game. It's also a lot of fun to run around and mock the other team when we score," Keaton Russo (12) said.

"I chose to be Elsa because she kinda looked like me more than any other princess. I wanted to be Jasmine, but I settled since I don't have brown hair." [SLam]

to a long Christmas break

On the first day of Christmas, holiday shopping officially begins. Students who don't flood into stores on Black Friday head to the Four States Fairgrounds for Mistletoe Fair.

On the second day of Christmas, dancers fill the Perot Theatre stage in The Nutcracker Ballet. On the third day, cheerleaders "Shop With a Cop" in Target. Mica Taylor (11) two cops to help a child find the perfect Christmas gift. "I loved seeing how thankful each of the children was to be getting presents," Mica Taylor (11) said.

Then on the fourth day, drill team, band and cheerleaders float through downtown in the Texarkana Christmas Parade.

On the fifth day, students spend long hours at Starbucks studying for their finals and trying out the new holiday flavors.

On the sixth day, elementary students wear their pajamas as they make ornaments and drink hot chocolate at the Art Department Children's Workshop with art students who help them with their projects.

On the seventh day of Christmas, teachers work to win the prize for the best holiday-decorated door.

"I let my class do all of the work, and when I found out we won, I rewarded them with cookies," math teacher Amanda Yowell said.

On the eighth day, clubs and groups get together to celebrate with their classmates. While journalism students and the girls' basketball team party in their pajamas, STUCO members hit the bowling alley and theater students play "Crappy Santa."

On the ninth day of Christmas, students at each lunch are surprised with hot chocolate and candy canes. Student Council members pass out the hot cups to cheer everyone up before their exams.

Then on the tenth day, cars packed with students roam local neighborhoods to scope out the Christmas decorations.

"This is my favorite thing about the holiday season because my friends and I pile into one car and drive around looking at the lights," Landry Trammell (9) said.

On the eleventh day, art teacher Nicole Brisco finds her senior students to deliver Christmas gifts.

"She got each of us an inspirational t-shirt to help get us through exams," Cage Watlington (12) said. "It really helped when I was on the verge of a mental breakdown."

On the twelfth day of Christmas, thousands of Hawk fans pile into the AT&T Stadium to support their team for another State Championship battle. And then with exams complete and the Hawks finishing the season with a runner-up title, students get ready for two weeks of Christmas break.

on the BRIGHT SIDE

While challenging classes didn't always seem like a good idea, students get the benefits from their hard work

// The Hawk
Pleasant Grove High School
Texarkana, Texas

1. STRATEGIZING over a board game using resources in Mr. John Strunc's honors economics class, Zach McCray (12) and Carter Brooks (12) lay out all of their pieces. "Our whole purpose was to try and be successful without trade in the economy," Zach said. [AYowell] 2. CUTTING a piece of metal, Ray Seastrunk (12) uses a torch to heat the pieces in order to cut them easier. "I really enjoy welding because I love doing hands-on activities plus it's a job I'm really wanting to pursue after I graduate," he said. "My favorite part is messing around with fire and metal." [GHiggins]

When Baylie Graves (12) filled out her choice sheet, she needed another science, but she had already crossed dual credit chemistry off her list. Definitely not happening. Then she saw Environmental Systems as a choice, she marked it. A quick decision but a good one.

Not all decisions turned out well. But that's okay. Bright Ideas always come around.

BRIGHT IDEA #1

"I decided to take welding because it's something I enjoy learning about. All my friends took the class too, so having them in welding makes it more fun. It's nice having time off campus to make the day go by faster," Parker Twisdale (12) said.

BRIGHT IDEA #2

"I took calculus because figured I had to take it sometime because of my major. If we're being honest, a high school class has to be easier than college, so I thought I might as well get it out of the way. I took a year off from math my junior year and I thought that was a bad idea. Once I got back into calculus the work was ok," Preston Allen (12) said.

BRIGHT IDEA #3

"Taking just one AP class was unusual because most people who take any AP classes stay in the AP bubble, but I balanced my schedule with Dual Credit and AP classes, so I feel that helped me have classes with different people instead of having the same people in most of my classes," Dawson Hatfield (12) said.

BRIGHT IDEA #4

"I take dual credit classes to get ahead on my college hours and to prepare myself for college. It makes me feel good to know that I will be going into college with hours completed that most students will not have," Carter Brooks (12) said.

BRIGHT IDEA #5

"I try to make my room inviting for students and something different than what a normal classroom looks like. I hate desks so having stools and tables makes the room more comfortable and allows my students to feel more like adults. The only problem I have with my room is finding chairs for cheap that are sturdy," Mrs. Shelby Strebeck.

3. FINDING a new whitboard, teacher Michele Morris and Alec Stewart (12) work math problems on the wall by the 300 hall while Mrs. Mac was on morning duty. "She helps me get better in math by breaking things down and allowing students to come in early for extra help," he said. [CWatlington] 4. THE GUMDROP contest gets underway as Lauren Hughes (12) demonstrates her group's Rubik's Goldberg Project. "Our task was to throw a piece of candy in the air, and I was really happy that after all the hard work we put into our project that it worked," she said. [PPesonghng] 5. Tossing a plastic globe in the air for an AP Statistics experiment, Katie Hutcherson (12) counts the number of times her pointer finger lands on water. "Statistics is fun, because we can do small projects and turn them into real results," she said. [SLam] 6. HEARTS and candy take the place of presentations and projects on Valentine's Day in AP US History as Phoebe Robertson (11) and Gabe Smith (11) celebrate with balloons and candy. "When we got to class, Mr. Baldwin surprised us with a Valentine's Day party, and let us have a fun day instead of doing work," she said. [CJoyce]

down to a SCIENCE

More than just quizzes and test — chemistry classes get out the goggles and gloves to learn the elements

Preparing a solution in chemistry, Delanyia Koeney (10) focuses on putting the right amount of silver in her test tube for her ornament. "I accidentally put too much water in my ornament, so instead of my ornament being a dark silver color, it ended up being faded," she said. [PPesonghng]

During a chemistry lab in Mrs. Shari Martindale's class, Cadence Pov (10) learns what happens to polyatomic atoms while they are on fire. "It was interesting to see how different ions make different color flames," she said. [EBeck]

Working with a bunsen burner for dual credit biology, Blaze Nicholson (11) tests how liver placed in various liquids reacts to a flame. "The lab we did was really unique and educational because it's not something you can just do in any class and it reacted in a way you wouldn't think would happen," she said. [MPope]

[fill in the blank]

Maggie Watlington (12) puts her taste buds to the test in her AP Government class. "We were trying name brand versus generic brand products and seeing if we could taste a difference. It was really hard to tell a difference with the Coke products. I guessed the wrong one for the name brand product." [KBashys]

"I went around taking pictures of the kids because I wanted to capture the fun and energy of Spring Fling," Mrs. Beck said. [GHiggins] 3. OUTSIDE during Best Week Ever, Bayle Graves (12) and Macy Young (10) compete in an intense game of cornhole. "As soon as I saw the cornhole game I ran towards it because it's my favorite game to play and I'm so good at it," Bayle said. "I ended up winning, too." [GHiggins] 4. AFTER preparing her sno cone just the way she likes it, Phoebe Robertson (11) poses for a picture before she starts to eat her favorite treat. "As soon as Kona Ice pulled in the parking lot I sprinted to get in line because shaved ice is my favorite thing to have when I am outside in the heat," Phoebe said. [GHiggins] 5. It's a tradition for Best Week Ever to have the Worst Weather Ever. Here's how it affected the week of activities:

TUESDAY
With rain forecast for Wednesday and Spring Fling on the calendar for that day, STUCO moved the lunchtime picnic to Tuesday.

WEDNESDAY
More rain predicted for Thursday and STUCO scrambled to find another date for the Color Run. No luck so that event was cancelled.

FRIDAY
The only event for Friday was the baseball playoff game but getting ready for prom on Saturday was what was on everyone's schedule.

Best Week Ever meant food and fun and most importantly, Spring Fling in the parking lot behind the school

FACE PAINTING

Students crowd around the face painting booth, waiting their turn to have their faces decorated with flowers and other designs.

"I never got the chance to get my face painted," Delanyie Keeney said, "but it was so cute seeing everyone, even seniors, have these childish designs like Batman or puppies on their faces."

"I went with my friends to get our faces painted. I got a blue star on my cheek, and someone got Thanos painted on them," Linda Lee (9) said. "I wanted to get creative and try something new."

KICKBALL

Pretend like you're playing baseball with your feet. That's what kickball entailed as students took to the grassy hill behind the school during their extended lunch period.

"My friends and I decided to walk over and start a kickball game. I've always loved kickball because I've played soccer all my life so I'm pretty good at it," Emma Sanderson (10) said. "After about five minutes, a bunch of people started showing up. At first it felt really crowded, but it was fun to play with people I've never even spoken to before. Everyone was just enjoying themselves and having a good time."

DUNK BOOTH

One, two, three, throw! Sophomore Landon Jackson prepares his throws and hits the center target perfectly. Math teacher Barbie Haidet sits in the booth and counts down the seconds till the board falls through and she splashes into the ice cold water below.

"Being able to dunk Mrs. Haidet was something I looked forward to doing because me and her are super close, and I wouldn't want to dunk anyone else," Landon said.

SNOW CONES

Get your ice. Choose a flavor. Soak the ice in strawberry, blue coconut, mango, piña colada, clear coconut and tiger's blood. Spoon it up.

"The line for snow cones was long and while we were standing there, it started to sprinkle a little," Whitney Derrick (10) said, "but it was definitely worth it."

BREAKFAST
of champions After a challenging pre-season schedule, Lady Hawks serve up a big come back to become district champions

With only freshman Hallie Lipharm and junior Rachael Leach left to serve and the score 1-0, senior Sydney Hopkins stands at the back of the court with nothing but a hula hoop flashing in her mind. It's the last few minutes of practice and it's obvious that her team will not win the game. Or most importantly Chick-Fil-A. They only had one simple task. Serve the ball into the hula hoop at the back of the court. It was simple except that Hallie and Rachael had struggled during most of the game. Hallie steps up to the service line with her entire team standing behind her. Hitting directly in the middle of the hoop, she left all the pressure to Rachel to tie the score for the opposite team.

"Rachael was the last server and the last two times she was up the ball went nowhere near the hula hoop, so we knew it wouldn't be close to the target this time," Sydney said. "And then when she served the ball, it landed in the center of the hoop. Our team went crazy and the other team started yelling that they had better serves the whole time and we just got lucky."

Luck or not, Sydney and the rest of her team earned Chicken Minis for practice the next day, but their win wasn't just about the minis. By the end of the season, the team was making all their serves and playing for a district title.

As the team began their pre district season, they struggled through to win games in a schedule that matched them against bigger and more difficult competition, but their record pushed them to work harder.

"It sounded bad when they announced our record at games, but nobody really paid attention," Baylie Graves (12) said. "It made us become a stronger team." (Continued on page 68)

"I don't really remember much from that game because I got a concussion diving for the ball," she said. "I hit the floor head first and everyone said they heard my head bounce. I played for awhile after that before anyone realized something was wrong." [JWatson]
2. SWINGING hard around the Liberty Eylau blockers, Katie Ferguson (10) scores point for her team. "When I'm hitting I try to place the ball where the opponents are not, so we can get a point," she said. [HKnigh] 3. ARMS in position, Ella Nichols (10) focuses on making her serve hard for Liberty Eylau to return defensively. "Before I serve, I hit the ball on the ground three times then spin it on my hand three times. I think about what spot I want to hit it to and if I want it to be a top spin or float serve," she said. in it to WIN IT

Going into the season, Coach Amy Collvins knew the team would be challenged to win every game. She hoped that the schedule would push their abilities to more than the pre-season.

"She never told us we were losing—she just said we were beating ourselves up," Baylie Graves (12) said. "Before district started, she called us into her office and we all thought we were getting in trouble. She told us this was the hardest schedule she had ever made, and she rewarded us by taking us all to Chick-fil-A."

District showed that the tough pre-season schedule played off because the team went undefeated in district, and the Lady Hawks won district for the first time in ten years. In the playoffs, they lost to Wills Point in the second round.

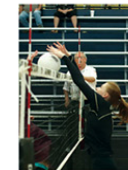

"My philosophy is that if you play better opponents you are going to play better. When you play state ranked teams, it will speed up your game and make your defense and offense work harder because it's better quality," Coach Amy Collvins said. "Being district champs was exciting because we haven't done that since I've been coaching here and since Paris and North Lamar have been in our district."

1. CELEBRATING one of her many aces, Macy Young (10), Sydney Hopkins (12), and Grace Pickelma (12) get in a huddle and pump each other up. "Cheering comes easy to me because I have been a cheerleader my whole life. I feel like cheering when we get a point helps us do better and gives us more energy during the games," Sydney said. [KCooks] 2. IN her serve-receive stance, Natalie Hale (12) watches the Pittsburg opponent serve the ball. [G Higgins] 3. You had to take time and organize all of the color in your life. It took a while. But just when you thought you had time to sit back and relax, your stomach rumbled. You had to make a pit stop at Fuji's for fried rice before heading home for the day. But the hunger didn't stop—it changed. You needed to be the best, at everything, always. It's the Pleasant Grove way of life. You fed one hunger, but that just fueled another.

MIXING it up

Teachers and students put their science knowledge to the test whenever they decide to head into the kitchen

PREPARE: If you've ever been in the kitchen and decided to make dessert, then you know that it takes several ingredients to make the batter. "Everything is made out of atoms including food and the ingredients, and when we cook or bake food, a chemical reaction happens," Mrs. Shail Martindale said. "All of the ingredients react when heat is added, which then forms together to make our everyday food that we eat."

MIX IT UP: After getting all the ingredients out of the refrigerator and the box, Aubrey Olier (10) throws all of them into a bowl and blends them until they turn into one substance. "It's always so satisfying to watch the batter pour into the pan so perfectly. I love mixing up the ingredients because all the wet and dry substances mix together and form just one big blob," she said. "My favorite thing to mix and bake would be brownies because you can make them however you want, whether it's gooey in the center or not."

BAKE: This part of the process is the most crucial. Mrs. Tori Depriest can't help but wait by the oven to make sure her desserts get perfectly cooked inside and out. "I love baking all kinds of desserts but mainly my favorite things are cakes, brownies, and cookies," she said. "My favorite part is getting to watch them bake and get closer to being able to take them out of the oven and eat them."

ENJOY: The oven timer in the kitchen goes off and Kathryn Davis (11) is standing right there, ready to see if her favorite dessert is finally finished. She gently takes the pan off of the cooking rack to reveal a dozen chocolate chip cookies perfectly baked and melted on the inside. "I've always cooked and baked my whole life, especially with my grandmother, and it's become something that has become fun and peaceful," she said. "Whenever I get stressed, I always make chocolate chip cookies because the smell always soothes my stress and helps me calm down."

Science students do more than just homework and tests in the classroom

Trying to get the right amount of chemicals, Brandon Awuah (10) creates an ornament during a chemistry lab. "The lab was extremely tedious because you had to follow all of the instructions perfectly or it wouldn't work out," he said. "Mine didn't work out but it was cool seeing the end result." [P Pasonghong]

Lighting a magnesium strip on fire, Caylin Scates (10) watches as it bursts into a flame. "It combusted into a really hot light for a second and then it just disappeared," she said. "My group got to do it three times. We used lots of Mr. Strawn's strips doing it so many times." [MPope]

Messing around with test tubes for dual credit biology, Blaze Nicholson (11) uses fire to see how liver reacts when it is placed into different environments. "The lab we did was really unique and educational because it's not something you can just do in any class, and it reacted in a way you wouldn't think would happen," she said. [MPope]

HERE for the GOLD

Every student handles competition a little differently than their competitors

CONFIDENT COMPETITOR

After dancing on tables and singing his part in the One Act play, "Les Miserables," Tommy Tye (11) wipes the sweat from his forehead. Filled with confidence that his cast members have done their best, he waits for the winner to be announced. "I would say that having amazing confidence can make you more intimidating in your competition," Tommy said. "Like if your opponent saw your face and you looked scared, it could boost their confidence, but if they saw a super confident face it could scare them."

LOW KEY COMPETITOR

Asked if she did the physics homework, Phoebe Robertson (11) shrugs it off and says she'll do it later. In the competition for the highest grades, Phoebe is at the top of the list. What makes her stand out is the way she acts so nonchalant about them.

"I always compete to get the best grades for rank and so that I know I am giving my best effort in each class," Phoebe said. "I sometimes act like grades aren't too important so I don't stress too much and so that I don't feel pressured to get a 100 on everything."

NERVOUS WRECK

"I'm going to be sick," Abby Davidson (10) says before the UIL cheer finals competition. Before every big performance, Abby's friends have to talk her out of her nerves. She thinks about every possible thing that could go wrong and lets the rest of the team know, too.

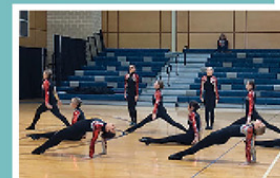

"Cheer competitions always seem like a lot of pressure, and I don't want to let my team down if I mess up," Abby said. "My nerves usually die down once the music plays and the routine starts."

more than TROPHIES

On their way to competition, Showstoppers get a few winning experiences before earning the gold

The Showstoppers practice one of their competition routines before leaving for San Antonio.

Dancing for family and friends, the team does a pre-competition performance at Show-Offs.

Before competing in San Antonio, the Showstoppers stopped in Dallas for a dance class with the Dallas Cowboy Cheerleaders who taught them a specially choreographed dance that they later performed at Spring Show. The next stop was Waco where they went to Magnolia to take pictures and shop. Then it was on to Bosque where they competed in the MA competition and won multiple awards: best in technique, best choreography and high point team. "It was bitter sweet because competition season is my least favorite," Hailey Whitten (12) said. "However, knowing it was my last one made me enjoy it so much more."

SWEATING the small stuff

The team makes it to round three of the playoffs by focusing on the small details of the game, and some glove superstitions.

It's all in the details. The Hawk baseball team believes strongly in that winning comes from every small detail adding up. This was shown by having a nineteen game winning streak in the early season. The Hawks come in strong in the early playoffs and overcame Gilmore in the first round and Brownsboro in round two. They traveled on to the Area championship, but were defeated by Kilgore in a three game series. Winning big games come from the emphasis on the details in their swings, throws, and taking care of their gloves. The five steps that were taken to care for their glove seemed simple but were a necessity to the team.

STEP 1: COMFORT

"There is not any thing unique about my glove except that it is mine. Every time a pitch hits my glove I tighten up the strings to make sure my glove looks nice and pretty," Keaton Russo(12) said. "Every time she gets lonely or I have not seen her in a while I give her a kiss," he said.

STEP 2: PATIENCE

"The bond with my glove grows stronger and stronger every year I play with it. It starts to form to your hand after so many catches," Marshall Oubre(12) said. "Mine definitely has the best pocket known to mankind, and it pops every time I catch a ball," he said.

STEP 3: PROTECTION

"It's the unspoken rule of baseball that you can not stick your hand in another person's glove," Nick Voyles said. "It is your glove and it is formed to your hand. My glove is my baby and she has been there for me through many tough games."

STEP 4: COMFORT

Pitcher Ryan Galvan makes sure his glove is comfortable before and after games. "I have had my same glove for the entire senior season," he said. "I take care of it by never just throwing it in my bag and I always put a ball inside of it to that it will keep shape from game to game."

STEP 5: WORTH

Sophomore Tucker Anderson makes sure his glove has importance. "My glove comes first over other equipment," he said. "My glove has to go into my bag last after everything else with the web facing down to ensure that it will not get ruined."

Cooking more
for Kathryn

Homemade ice cream, pasta, salmon and layered cakes are just a few of the mouth watering recipes that junior Kathryn Davis cooked for her friends and family. After growing up in the kitchen, cooking came naturally to her and she enjoyed baking especially and trying new recipes.

"I started cooking with my grandmother when I was younger. I would go over and spend entire days baking different cupcakes and muffins," Kathryn said. "She taught me how to cook and I have loved baking every since."

If there was ever an event or party, Kathryn was the go-to for any must have desserts. She baked cakes and cookies for journalism and drill team parties, and she also cooked with her friends and family.

"My friends and I would switch off every Sunday night and cook for each other," she said. "One time I made tomato basil pasta with garlic bread."

As the main cook in her house, she cooked dinner for her family on a regular basis. Her main focus was making recipes from scratch. She used simple ingredients to make delicious healthy meals that everyone could enjoy.

"I am the best cook in my family. For my birthday I got a teal Kitchen Aid mixer, and I do not let anyone else in my family use it," she said.

Not only did she love making the food, but she worked at being an expert at decorating. She made decorated cakes and iced cookies that looked as if they came straight out of a magazine photo.

"The most important thing when I cook is making it presentable," she said. "I focus a lot on making sure that it looks just as amazing as it taste."

Kathryn hoped to cook when she was in college and wanted to continue making fun recipes for events.

"I usually never eat what I make at first," she said. "I get nervous when people try my food, but they are usually very complimentary after trying what I made."

COOKING something UP

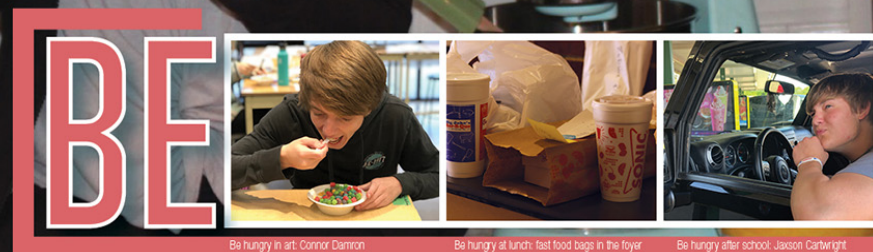

Sehth McNeal

Sehth McNeal started baking for a reason, a really good one.

"I bake gluten free things because I'm gluten intolerant. I developed the allergy over time and surprisingly making the change to being gluten free was fairly easy," she said.

Her favorite: carrot cake cupcakes. "I really just bake for the holidays and such, but I like trying new things, because making the same old things gets boring."

1. A CELEBRATION begins at midfield during a game against North Lamar, Dillon Williams (12), Zach Goins (12), and Anthony Mejia (11) after Dillon scored a goal. "My teammates always hype me up after scoring a goal, and they always bring energy after the goal. I love celebrating with them because they are the reason I am able to score," Dillon said. [CWatlington] 2. THROWING the ball in, Anthony Mejia (11) searches for an open teammate up field, away from their Texas High opponents. "When I put the ball in play, I try to throw the ball in to someone up the middle or someone up the field in a scoring position. My goal is to create an opportunity for someone to score," he said. [GHiggins] 3. WHILE dribbling the ball, Reese Erod (9) waits for the team to get in their formation for a better chance to get around the North Lamar players. "Being a freshman on varsity made me feel accomplished because I have been playing my whole life, but I also felt pressure being one of the youngest on the team," he said. [CWatlington] 4. DEFENDING the ball from a Texas High opponent, Aaron Malone (11) clears the ball up the field. "Defending is more complicated than people believe because you have to look at many factors and block down so the ball can not get closer to the goal," he said. [GHiggins] 5. SPRINTING towards the ball, Zach Iglesia (12) tries to outrun North Lamar's player to the ball. "The game was very intense because it determined if we made it to playoffs or not. We all played the best we could, and it paid off when we won the game," he said. [CWatlington]

another [GOAL]IE

Injuries and difficulties were always around the corner for the boys' soccer team.

When the boys' soccer season started, their goal was to make it to the playoffs. By the time it ended, they just wanted to finish the season with a goalie.

"In the past years we made it to the playoffs, so our goal this year was to make it again," Eliud Cruz (12) said, "but we lost a lot of players last year, so the team was young and it was hard to find players for every position."

It didn't help when the goalies went down to injury — five in total.

"The goalie situation was very chaotic and cost us a lot of goals," Connor Damron (10) said. "It kind of messed up the team chemistry when we had to pull players from different positions to play goalie."

When the first goalie, Liam Cairns (9), had back spasms, Quinn Bingham (10) moved up from junior varsity.

"I played goalie last year and had to step up this season. I was nervous because I didn't want to upset the older guys," Quinn said. "And then I ended up getting hurt during the game against Chapel Hill because of a shoulder injury from football season."

As Quinn laid on the ground, Tiseyi Olosunde (10) prepared himself to go in. He hadn't played goalie in two years, so he was a little rusty.

After that game against Chapel Hill, Zach Iglesia (12) and Anthony Mejia (11) had to switch in and out of the goalie position.

"Having Zach and Anthony playing goalie made it hard for the team, because we needed them in the field playing their regular positions," Dillon Williams (12) said.

Despite the injuries and chaos, the team accomplished their goal: they made it to the third round only to be knocked out by North Lamar. And they met that other goal, too: they made it there with a goalie.

A WHOLE new game

In the first year for some players to play soccer, it took the whole team to come together

The season for the junior varsity soccer team was intensely spent trying to increase their speed and endurance during games.

"JV was a lot of fun learning about the game and getting to compete with my friends. It was my first year playing and my coaches and teammates helped me out a lot by teaching me more about playing the game," Grayson Taylor (10) said.

With a portion of the team just learning the game, it was an accomplishment to get the record of 3-6-1. Junior varsity took their game to a new level as they grew with each other as a team.

Keeping the ball away from the defender from North Lamar, Brandon Awuah (10) kicks the ball up the field to a teammate. "I had a defender guarding me, so I passed it up the field because it was the best thing to do in my situation," he said. [CWatlington]

Dribbling the ball up the field, Seth Sharp (10) searches to find an open teammate to score a goal against North Lamar. "When I have the ball, I always try to better the ball and find open teammates to score a goal," he said. [CWatlington]

"It was really rewarding after playing Texas High for four years in a row and then finally beating them my senior year in a very convincing manner, not only once, but twice," she said. [Arlow] 4. FIGHTING off a Texas High defender, Sapana Pokhrel (10) makes a move toward the goal. [CWatlington] 5. PLAYING at home against Mount Pleasant, sophomores Aubrey Oler and Della Tuttlebee congratulate one another after making a good play. Lady Hawks celebrate a winning season with a little song and dance

One by one the Lady Hawk soccer team piled onto the bus after a long but successful game against Texas High. Preparing to celebrate, Presley Garvin (11) pulled out her speaker and bluetoothed her phone, playing their traditional post-game song, "Before He Cheats." As the singing gets louder and louder—so loud that they could no longer hear the song on the speaker, they pulled up right next to the other team's bus and continued to celebrate.

"There's no better feeling than winning one of our biggest games, screaming at the top of our lungs to a song the whole team loves, and then coming up beside the other team on the road and making awkward eye contact," Avery Jensen (12) said. "We knew they were right beside us and that made us want to scream even louder."

The celebration that night was one of many during the season as the Lady Hawks finished the season 18-2, including a perfect record at home and a district title. And while all those celebrations involved singing, Sapana Pokhrel (10) and Avery Cornish (12) started dance battles in the aisle of the bus after a couple of games.

"The dance battles became a traditional thing—the team got a good laugh out of it, and it kept all of us entertained on the long boring bus rides," Sapana said. "It became something the whole team looked forward to after every game."

As the season got close to an end, the senior girls put on a positive mindset and tried to be prepared for their last game. That didn't happen until the regional quarterfinals where the Lady Hawks fell to Spring Hill.

After the girls finished their last game, they all gathered back onto the bus for one last ride and one last song.

"It was very emotional riding back on the bus for the last time," Katie Hutcheson (12) said, "knowing the seniors would never get to relive moments like these."

LOUD and CLEAR

You went places, you didn't stop. Maybe you couldn't. You had a force that pushed you that extra mile. You weren't scared to be loud and wear neon yellow on the first day of school to stand out. Your ears were ringing when you shot your way to a podium finish in trap with your shotgun team. So yeah, you earned bragging rights. Be as LOUD as you can be about it. After all, it's not bragging if it's true. Even if you weren't the one who went to Carnegie Hall to accept an art award, you were cheering loudly in the background. Don't worry, you were heard.

2. PLAYING in the stands, Ryan Matthews (11) performs the crowd favorites with the rest of the band. These tunes are usually the best parts of the game for not only the crowd but also for the band. "I love the way everyone gets hyped when we play stand tunes, it's definitely my favorite part of performing at football games," Ryan said. [GHiggins]

Spending his summer practicing with the band, Ricardo Luna (11) makes sure he's ready for football season. "Summer band is the body of when we get all our stuff done and really commit to making one sound and becoming like a family. From there it's just cleaning and polishing," he said. [SLam]

"You know being an exchange student, I wouldn't have thought I would have been a part of something so amazing and fun." [GHiggins]

4. FOCUSED on his music, Isaac Neuman (9) performs alongside his bandmates at the state championship game in Arlington. The band performed school related songs during halftime at the game. "Playing at state as a freshman was a very enjoyable experience. I never thought I'd get to play in such a big stadium with so much echo my freshman year," Isaac said. [GHiggins]

5. MALLET'S ready, Chad Haldet (10) plays the xylophone during the halftime show at the first game. "The marching band performed a halftime show inspired by the Dark Ages. I have marched at some football games when we don't perform our show," Chad said. "I got a little bored sometimes standing with ensemble, but it's enjoyable no matter what." [GHiggins]

running THE SHOW

The best part of the game happened at half time

With six to eight minutes left in the half, the nerves kick in.

Row by row, the band files out of the stands and heads to the end zone to line up. As the Showstoppers finish their performance, Todd Haldet's favorite part of Friday night begins.

"I love halftime. I always look forward to it," he said. "We prepare for it throughout the week so when we perform, we get to go out there and just have fun."

The feeling was contagious throughout the band section for band members who spent every Friday night on the football field from August to December performing "Through the Ages."

"This was my first season marching with the band, but not my first time in band," Todd said.

Whether it was a big hit or a perfect toss and catch, Megan Massey loved to be on the field performing. Although she loved to spin her flag, Megan enjoyed walking on and off the field more.

"The band walks off together, but the color guard has to stay behind to pick up all the props," Megan Massey said. "We've had people drop things and leave them on the field at the football game so I have to run out there and get it, so they can finish the game or they'll break something."

During the show, big hits were a favorite and made Dani Bean smile and gave her confidence that the show sounded good.

"I like playing and marching, especially during the big sounds because you start to smile," Dani said. "The first big song during our show this year was my favorite; that one always made me smile."

Playing music and marching was more than just the beauty you see at the performance. Todd had a happy accident during a halftime show, but didn't let it affect him.

"One time I was getting up on my stand I was supposed to be on, and I tripped and fell in front of everyone," he said. "Nobody really noticed, so I just got up and kept going on with the show."

Band was more than playing in the stands or on the field. Many of them also enjoyed watching the Hawks take the field.

"Most people come into band not knowing much about football and then by the end of the season we're all really into it," Dani said. "At the beginning of freshman year, I didn't know anything about football, but at the end, I loved it."

Football season came to a brutal stop in December, a change in routine for band members and some didn't like it.

"I love football," Todd said. "I wish the season would never end."

Students get pumped up about returning to State

"I was pumped up at the game because we had just won the last playoff game which would send us back to state. Going to state on my first year of being on varsity was a really special experience because I got to bond with everybody and play at AT&T Stadium." Jason Parker (10) [GHiggins]

"Cheering in the stands always gives me a huge rush of adrenaline and I just go crazy, because I want to show my school pride and how proud I am of my fellow friends and athletes." Cade Haak (10) [GHiggins]

[EBeck] 2. AT THE homecoming pep rally the senior class screams in hopes of winning the class yell and the game later that night. "I feel like class yell helps us get pumped for the game because it gets the whole school motivated rather than everyone just going to the game and singing our school song," Taylor Teel said. "When we do class yell all of us get hyped up for the game and it makes us want to go." [EBeck] 3. DANCING in the stands sophomores Nick Martin, Logan Johnson, and Landon Jackson support the Hawks through an intense basketball game at Liberty Elyou. "I like to go to the basketball games because of my friends, the energy, and the environment," Nick said. "I really get into the basketball games especially when someone dunks or a good song comes on to dance to." [GHiggins]

LOUD and CLEAR

With the Hawks soaring high, students make an extra effort to support their teams

LOUD. With black and gold cheers roaring through the gym, the freshmen and sophomores cup their hands and scream their "color" during the pep rally class yell. Brooks Beck (9) joins his class so his grade will win for having the most spirit.

"At the pep rallies the class yell was always the loudest part. Sometimes it would get so loud that I would have to yell at my friends who were sitting right next to me," he said.

LOUDER. The ball bounces off the rim and into the net, the buzzer sounds, and the crowd goes wild.

"I go to the basketball games to show school spirit and hang out with my friends. I like to look up the other teams' roster so the student section can yell their names and have a home court advantage," Miller Hornsby (12) said.

LOUDEST. With the returning state champions on the football field, every game was a loud game especially the state-semifinal game against Iowa Park. When the games were close, sometimes the team needed a little more encouragement from the crowd.

"I try to get everyone involved by yelling and waving my arms towards the crowd to pump them up," Antonio Watkins (11) said. "If I see we're falling behind, I tell the other players to keep their heads up because I know with the students behind us we still have a chance to win."

Real or not, 'babies' kept students up at night, learning about parenthood

With a full day of school and late night studies, every Human Growth and Development student learned how to juggle their everyday activities with having a child. After being assigned a computerized "baby" that required constant care, students took on parenting for a week. "The hardest part about having the baby was waking up during the night. It was challenging to manage everything I normally do plus having the baby, so I took everything day by day." Lauren Overmyer (12) said. [GHiggins]

"Debate is interesting because I like being a part of a team and there really is no wrong answer when I'm giving my opinion on certain topics," he said. 2. AFTER PRESENTING their own drawings for the new elementary school, Mary Old (12) and Kristen Key (12) review the architect's drawings with Dr. Jason Smith and interior design teacher Tiffany Horton. "After presenting in front of the architect and superintendent, it's definitely not going to be nerve wracking presenting in front of anybody else now," Mary said. [GHiggins]

Speaking in front of an audience is a task pretty much everyone fears. Or not. For students like Phoebe Robertson (11), it's something she dreads, especially in Spanish V class.

"I don't feel prepared and don't know what order to put my words in," she said. "What's worse is that I'll say them wrong."

While mispronunciations often lead to embarrassment, students in classes like Debate had to get used to competing one on one. "Debate has helped me grow confident with the help of my friends and tournaments," Codie Lawing (12) said. "Now I can just say whatever comes to my mind."

In a similar environment, the class of Music Theory required a lot of interaction and knowledge. What made it more awkward was there only being three students in the class.

"I struggle at music theory in general, especially when it comes to harmonic dictation," Kaden Dawson (11) said. "I usually don't volunteer to share my answers because they are usually wrong and it's embarrassing."

On the other hand, signing up for design classes required presenting ideas every week. Kristin Key (12) has experienced three years of Interior Design.

"Having to constantly present our architecture sketches gives us an insight on future careers such as engineering, which I want to study," she said. "Mary and I even got to be a part of the design team for the new elementary school."

Whether it was England or Ireland, living in a different country for some time has made Isaac Neuman (9) comfortable with speaking to people.

"I enjoy giving presentations or dialogues in French class. The last time I went to France, I couldn't carry out a conversation," he said. "But I wanted to do something about it and French is one of the classes I found success in."

SHOOT for the SKY

Shotgun team has only one target that is everyone truly gunning for

TRAIN

Every Sunday, rain or shine, the shotgun club meets at Rocky Creek Shooting Facility to practice. Yes, rain. Most of the shoots ended up in storms or standing water on the shooting platform. Practice like you play.

"Almost all our shoots were in the rain, so that meant when it rained outside on practice days we would still shoot," Peyton Stringer (9) said. "It helped us find tricks to keeping everything sort of dry."

While trapshooters compete alone and as a team, it is mainly an individual sport. The shooters practice and compete with the same people.

"Shooting with a certain squad makes the competitions and the practices more familiar," Palmer Duke (11) said. "You aren't having to suddenly meet people before you shoot, and you know how the people are going to act during a match. It's just easier to find a rhythm."

COMPETITION

Between the first shot and the last there can only be a few errors. Missing just one target can cost you a medal, especially at the State Championships for the Scholastic Clay Target Program. Mary Old walked away with a state title by finishing first place in Varsity Ladies' Trap and getting fifth overall. Palmer Duke was second in Varsity Mens' Trap and ended up second overall. Along with individual awards, the team earned second place overall trap as a team.

"Competitions are the most thrilling things that we do. It really gets my heart racing while a sense of calm comes over me," Mary said. "Shooting is definitely a sport that pushes you to not miss anything and to reach perfection. It can be difficult to relax and have fun, so I always appreciate having my team with me. They helped me reach my goal to win the ladies' trap competition."

what's in your SHOOTING bag?

There are simple necessities that shooters are required to have before stepping on the line

Glasses & Lenses

Using different colored lenses can help the shooters see the target better. They also leave tan lines behind.

Earplugs

Trying to keep their ears from ringing, the team gets custom earplugs made because they are more durable.

Choke Tubes

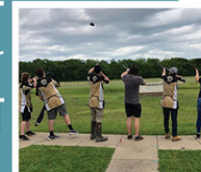

The tubes go in the barrel of the gun and cause the "shot" in a tight pattern or a larger one.

TAKING a shot at a target in the DeKalb Invitational Shoot, Nathan Jennings (12) holds his gun steady. "We train at the same place that the shoot was held. It made it less stressful because the competition felt like any other practice," he said. [G Higgins]

SHOOT your SHOT

For the shooting team shows it's more than just aiming a gun

After shooting his first perfect round, Peyton Stringer (9) watches his teammates shoot his hat. It's a tradition that proves a shooter has improved their shooting abilities since they first began.

Competing in a local shoot at Rocky Creek Shooting Facility, Carson Sanders (10) tries to hit every target in his trap event. "Shooting is different from other sports because staying relaxed is considered good technique whereas other sports use adrenaline and to their advantage," he said. [G Higgins]

Posing with coaches Gary Old and Nick Duke, Mary Old (12) accepts her award for earning a spot on the Varsity team. "Having my dad as a coach definitely was an interesting dynamic. We are really goofy, so we would have to balance taking the shooting seriously while still having fun," she said. [NOld]

a whole NEW BALL GAME

Lady Hawks take a new coach, a new team and a new style into regional semi-finals

The word intimidating didn't exist in the Lady Hawks' vocabulary. They preferred another word: motivation. The girls started the season with three new starting players and a new coach and were able to take this and turn into one of their best seasons yet.

The three new players, all juniors—Miaya Ware, Asia Lloyd and Keshawn Davis—didn't intend to come to the same school, but all ended up enrolling for different reasons. And when junior Shanequa Henry discovered that they had enrolled, she knew good things were going to happen.

"We kind of knew we were going to the playoffs by the first few games," Shanequa said. "We knew we were going to be good because we had good chemistry."

In addition, four of the team members had played summer league together. The girls traveled all across the South to compete against other teams. The team finished first in the Toadsuck Championship, with over 50 teams in their division, and spent their whole summer together, having five- to seven-hour practices.

"We became like a family from spending so much time around each other—we are a family," Keshawn said.

With summer ending, Miaya, Asia, and Keshawn were going to be playing on a new court. The girls weren't too stressed about playing with a new team; instead they were excited for the season to come.

"It was easy for us to come in and start playing right away," Asia said. "That's how good our chemistry is."

But it took more than chemistry for things to come together. New head coach Marsha Cowling instilled tougher and more intense practices.

"Coach doesn't let us slack off in practice," Keshawn said. "If we play sloppy in practice, we play sloppy in the game."

The Lady Hawks started the season with three straight wins, before losing to 5-A Texas High, a hometown rival.

"It was a game I knew we shouldn't have lost, but I'm proud of my team because we gave it our all. It was a battle between us and them," Keshawn said.

1. DRIBBLING the ball, junior Asia Lloyd sprints down the court at the game against Paris. "Not every game was easy," Asia said. "Some were harder than others, but Paris was an easy win." 2. TAKING a break, juniors Keyshaun Davis, Sheniqua Henry, and Miaya Ware rest on the bench at a game against Liberty Eylau. "When I'm on the bench, I try to watch the player playing my position," Keshawn said. 3. READY to shoot, junior Phoebe Robertson shoots from the free throw line at the game against New Boston. "I usually dribble the ball three times, pause and stare at the goal before shooting a free throw," Phoebe said. Her routine must help because of her nearly perfect free throw record. 4. GAUDDING a Liberty Eylau player, junior Miaya Ware ensures the in 71-53 at LE. "Playing the post just fits me," Miaya said. "It's an aggressive position and I contribute to the team more when I'm playing there."

it's an HONOR

Senior Night brings recognition and a few tears

Senior players say goodbye to their home basketball court before playing a final game. However, one player didn't have that opportunity. "It felt weird not being able to play with my team, but I wasn't too upset because I enjoy watching my friends play," Dawson Hatfield (12) said. After receiving their gifts in the ceremony, the team won their last home game against Pittsburg with a big comeback from behind.

fresh on the COURT

New players on the court lead the Lady Hawks to the playoffs

Getting around a player from Brownsboro, Miya Ware (10) settles into her position on her new team. "I felt like I already belonged and that I was a part of the team from the start. In all I was comfortable before the season even started," she said. [EBeck]

Spotting a teammate over the Liberty Eylau player, Keyshaun Davis (11) makes a pass to move the ball down the court. "I have friends on the team that I have played with since I was little, so it helps me to focus since we know each other's skills," she said. [EBeck]

Taking a free throw in the game against New Boston, Asia Lloyd (11) does all she can to support her new team. "I didn't know how the atmosphere at the games would be or how the crowd would respond, but it didn't feel any different because I'm with people I've been playing with for forever," she said. [Klayne]

"I really enjoyed playing at the higher level and competing with the group of girls because they are super talented. I worked on getting them to play to the best of their abilities. I wanted to teach them to play at a higher speed so I could get the most out of their talent and ability," Coach Marsha Cowling said. [EBeck]

Lady Hawks settle into a new routine, winning results

The third game between Liberty Eylau and the Lady Hawks was one of their most intense games of the season. The Lady Hawks were only ahead by 2 points at the end of the first quarter, but they ended the game with a victorious win 71-57.

"This game was interesting because we were close with the other players, so that just made us play even harder," Miya Ware (11) said. "When we go out on the court, nothing can be taken personal because we're trying to win."

Their tough practices and long hours in the gym paid off. The Lady Hawks led the last district game against Paris and won with 61-28 to take the district title.

The celebration of the Lady Hawks' district championship lasted for about one minute. After that, it was back to business.

"For us, it's always business," Shaniqua said. "We're always getting prepared for the next game."

Moving into playoffs, the team swept through first and second round with ease. In the third round the girls played Brownsboro winning 54-51, with a three point buzzer beater shot to end the game. Playing for their first time ever in the Regional-Semi finals, the girls faced Lincoln but fell 71-39, ending their season.

"They were better than us and the score proved that," Asia said. "It was a hard loss because we went from winning almost every game to losing."

junior VARSITY

Coaches and players both worked double time between all of the teams. Coaches Abby Pickett, freshman coach, and Rexa Colburn, JV coach, worked with their teams and assisted with varsity throughout the season while players moved from JV to varsity. The Freshman team finished their season with a record of 10-5 and JV had a record of 15-6.

Hallie Ligham (9)
"When I'm playing I try to keep my head in the game and stay focused on winning the game. I have to put all of my thoughts and stress in the back of my mind so that all I think about is the next play," she said. [EBeck]

"Basketball is my happy place, it makes me feel good. I don't think about anything else when I'm on the court," she said. [Klawell]

KESHAWN DAVIS (11) : LEAD BY EXAMPLE

Q: Would you consider yourself a leader for the team?

A: Yes because some of my teammates are hard headed, so I have to make sure they're on the right track.

Q: What's the best way that you lead your team?

A: By starting the communication between us and everyone just tags along.

Q: What do you like to do to lift your teams' spirit if they're down?

A: If it's an individual person, I just talk to them one-on-one and try to figure out what's going on with them. If it's the whole team, I tell them what we need to do to win instead of pouting. I mainly try to put a smile on their faces and let them know everything is going to be okay.

Q: Describe yourself with as many words as possible

A: Energetic, Mindful, Athletic, Determined, Cute [Submitted]

MAGGIE WATLINGTON (12) : LOUD... REALLY LOUD

Q: Why do you like messing around in class?

A: The main reason is to distract the class and the teacher from doing work, and it always works.

Q: What's the funniest thing you've done in class?

A: I turned on the projector and it almost caught on fire. I also lit a desk on fire in first grade from my teacher's candle.

Q: What's the worst thing you've done in class or to a teacher?

A: I taped naked pictures of people around my teacher's desk, and I would print pictures of Channing Tatum's butt.

A: Funny, Creative, Rambunctious, Intelligent [T-Hicks]

TYLER KELLEY (12) : BEING INVOLVED

Q: What made you want to be the basketball manager?

A: I wanted to help other people and still be involved in athletics after football season.

Q: Why do you like being so involved in the games?

A: It just makes my last high school experience memorable, and I enjoy making everyone around me high school's experience better.

Q: What was the reason you wore a basketball uniform to the game?

A: It was the last home game and senior night for the basketball boys, but I also wanted to do something no one has done and something everyone would remember.

Q: Describe yourself with as many words as possible

A: Fun, Genuine, Passionate, Laid back [T-Hicks]

BAYLIE GRAVES (12) : MAKING AN IMPACT

Q: When did you start going on mission trips?

A: I started going on mission trips in eighth grade, but I officially went to Jamaica my sophomore year.

Q: What made you want to go back?

A: I really love kids. Whenever we go on mission trips we are with kids every single day.

Q: What's your favorite part about the whole experience?

A: During the week we go to 30 elementary schools. Most mission trips stay with one group, but we get to see all those different kids.

Q: How long do you plan to go on mission trips?

A: I plan to go on mission trips for as long as I can, or as long as my church continues to go.

Q: Describe yourself with as many words as possible.

A: Outgoing, Responsible, Kind, Honest [Submitted]

ROSS WYLES (12) : MAKING NOISE

Q: What made you want a motorcycle?

A: I've always grown up around motorcycles. Both of my parents had one.

Q: What do you do when the weather gets really bad?

A: I try to find shelter, but in most cases I will take it back home and not ride it for the day.

Q: What is a must when you're riding on your motorcycle?

A: I always try to be safe. I wear my helmet every time and I have to wear pants when I ride.

A: Calm, Athletic, Handsome, Respectful [Submitted]

SHAWN EDMONDS: LOUD OUTFITS

Q: Have you always worn bright colors?

A: Yes for as long as I can remember.

Q: Why do you like wearing bright colors?

A: My clothing reflects my outlook so I'm attracted to bright colors because they make me happy.

Q: What's the loudest clothing you have in your closet? What color is it?

A: I have a dress that a bought to wear to one of my Arkansas pageants. Hot pink.

A: Friendly, Introverted, Adventurous, Thoughtful, Contradictory, Loving [T-Hicks]

how to shoot the SHOT

There is no pressure like a shooting a free throw in the middle of a close game

STEP 1

In a game against Henderson, T'Vondrick Henry (10) lines up his shot. "I work on my free throw form in practice. I keep working on my form because I want to help my team succeed," he said. [EBeck]

STEP 2

Competing against cross town rivals Texas High, Garret Young (12) brings the ball back before shooting. "I just shoot a lot of shots and make sure I go game speed when I'm shooting," he said. [GHiggins]

STEP 3

In the first round of playoffs against Henderson, Jared Glover (12) holds his follow through after his shot. "For free throws, I dribble the ball two times and spin it in my hands and take the shot," he said. [EBeck]

[fill in the blank]

Up for the dunk, Deandre Robinson (12) makes the shot for the Hawks in the first round of the playoffs. "I'll have the chance to dunk, I love it, but I also look for open teammates who can shoot," Dre said. [EBeck]

1. PASSING the ball across court, Noah Fawbush (12) tosses the ball overhead to teammate, Layton Jackson (11) in a game against Texas High. "We have several plays that are for zone: man to man, and some situational," Noah said. "The beginning of most possessions start with a play call, but if we can get out and run in transition, plays are not necessary." [KCook] 2. PREPARING to defend against Liberty-Eylau, Sergio Rodriguez (11) follows the ball. On defense, Hawk players play close attention to where the ball is in hopes of stealing the ball back and adding points to the board. "We have a certain zone called purple that gets us a lot of turnovers," he said. "The team at least gets the ball back every other possession." [EBeck] 3. SHUFFLING across court, Jared Glover (12) warms up with his teammate. Before each game, the Hawks run out through lines and do a specific warm up drill. "During warm ups, we usually get hyped and listen to T'Vondrick freestyle," Jared said. [EBeck]

rewriting FAKE news

From pre-district to the playoffs, boys Hawk basketball team prove critics — and newspapers — wrong by clenching the district title

Walking into the locker room for the first practice, senior Dre Robinson looks up to see the paper taped to the white board.

On it was the list of the pre-season rankings from MaxPreps. Pleasant Grove: 5th. Last in district. The bottom of the list. Not expected to make the playoffs. Not going to win.

"Seeing the clippings and pre-season rankings motivated us a lot because we knew we were better than most of the teams out there," Dre said. "We talked about the rankings when they came out at the very beginning of the season, and as a team, we decided we weren't going to let them become reality for us."

By the end of the season, the Hawks had a whole notebook of clippings and lists that underestimated them. All proven wrong.

"We were chose to get very last in district and to lose every playoff game," T'Vondrick Henry (10) said. "There was one sheet of paper with the other teams ahead of us, then we were last."

Being doubled the whole season only made the Hawks train and compete harder each time they were on the court.

With a new coach, three returning varsity members, and a mainly "rookie" team, the Hawks made it through district, finishing second. A newly formed team with a new playbook made it all the way to the semifinal round of the playoffs in Commerce, Texas.

"We went four rounds into the playoffs, but we were expected to lose every game," Dre said. "It made us feel like we had something to prove."

Although there were many doubters, Coach Dwight McCowan didn't let that get into his players head. He gave them continuous pep talks before each game.

HOME COURT

Hawks rather play on their home court because...

DYLAN HOPKINS [11] "I would rather play on our home court because the crowd keeps us into the game and hyped up. Our student section does a really good job of cheering us on throughout the whole game," he said.

TERRENCE TURNER [12] "I would rather play at home because the atmosphere in the gym during home games makes the game it. The fans are always with us yelling, cheering us on, and fighting with us," he said.

LAYTON JACKSON [11] "I most definitely like playing at home rather than away because more fans show up. The bigger crowd we have, the more hype the gym is. It's more fun to play in a hyped up atmosphere," he said.

playing in the BIG GYM

Waiting to rebound a missed free throw, Kennon Kelley focuses on the ball. "Playing JV was a great experience and I'm glad that I got the opportunity to do that," Kennon Kelley said. (9) Despite a 3-10 record, the JV team got valuable experience and some players got the chance to move up to varsity at the end of the season. [EBeck]

Looking for an open teammate, Whitt Lawrence (9) dribbles toward the basket in a home game against L-E. The Hawks lost to the Leopards by only three points in a suspenseful end of the game. [EBeck]

During a time-out, JV players get instructions and hydration. "When I'm playing in the big gym, I get motivated because I know my team has my back and that the fans are cheering me on. More people come watch there us which makes me play better," Code Norris (10) said. [EBeck]

[fill in the blank]

Trying to get to the basket, Antonio Watkins (11) works around a Liberty Eylau player. "Playing in the new gym is more hype than the old gym because we have more fans in there. We also get more support from the students," Antonio said. [photo]

Proving critics wrong, Hawks continue to play past the regular season

"Coach would tell us that we had to go out there and try our hardest," TVondrick (10) said. "He also said that we had to have fun and give it all we have on the court."

The team didn't let the negativity affect their time spent on the court. If anything, it made the three of the seniors who had played together since middle school step up as leaders and pull the team together.

"Our team is like brothers," TVondrick said. "Three of the seniors had played together before, then three of the younger guys played together in summer league."

The history that the team shared gave them a unique competitive edge against other teams in their district.

"We played as a team which made the biggest difference," TVondrick said. "We all played together. Whenever we got down, we all talked on the court and had good communication."

Playing Mabank was one of the major turning points in terms of the putting team's confidence together. They proved to themselves they were good enough to make it in the playoffs.

"The second round of playoffs was our turn-around game. We were down by 35 at halftime. It was 40-15, but we came back and won," Dre said.

The team proved everyone wrong until finally losing to Oak Cliff Faith Family Academy in the fourth round of the playoffs.

But in the game, the Hawks were able to prove to the writers and the critics that there was more to them than just their rankings.

"In the fourth round, we lost to the team that finally won state," Dre said. "It was a close game and they only won by four points. Nobody thought we could do that either and we proved them wrong."

1. ON A DRIVE to the basket, Keshawn Stuart(12) beats the Leopards defense to add points to the board in the home game against L-E. When the Hawks get the ball, their instinct is to make a shot. [EBeck] 2. DRIBBLING down court against Texas High, TVondrick Henry (10) looks to see who is open. The next move will either be taking it to the goal or making a pass. "I like being point-guard because I get to call the plays, but I also have to make sure everyone is in the right place and take care of the ball," TVondrick Henry said. [Ghliging] 3. WARMUPS over, Layton Jackson (10) heads to the bench for the player introductions and the tip-off against Pittsburg. "When I'm getting ready to play, what goes through my head is mainly the plays and what I need to do to help the team," he said. [EBeck] 4. LOOKING to make a pass against Paris, Jared Glover (12) looks for who can take the pass. Glover passes against the blocking of a Paris player. "I keep my head clear when I'm playing," Jared said. "I rely on my teammates to get open to make sure the pass gets in." [EBeck]

2. LOOSENING up back stage, Cara Court (11) and Chloe Carpenter (11) wait for the start of the first night of Spring Show. "Right before the show started I tried to get all my nerves out and just have fun and get excited to show all our dances," Cara said. [KDavis]

Can you still not hear? There was a lot of head pounding ways to be loud, but the only point in being loud is if you were there. TRULY magnificent

For the Showstoppers, Spring Show goes beyond just a performance held each year

They enter the stage. The screen rises. The two spotlights go on. The girls hold back tears as they prepare to do their last dance of the year. For 35 years, the Showstoppers have been high-kicking at halftime, and 28 of those have included the same finale at the annual Spring Show.

Chloe Carpenter's mother— brand new drill team director Mrs. Stephanie Carpenter—and the 1992 senior captain, Jenny Treadway Bearden, mom to Brooklynn Bearden (12) stand in the foyer of the school. They've decided to choreograph an original routine for the finale of the annual spring show to "The Magnificent Seven" theme song.

"Knowing that my mom helped make up Mag Seven and wrote the intro the captain reads each year just made it that much more special that I was getting to do both of those things," Brooklynn said.

Morgan Lane, a sophomore Showstopper, is killed in a car accident. The 1996-1997 Showstoppers perform a competition dance to "One Sweet Day" as a tribute.

Each year, the booster club gives a scholarship to a senior, this year, Andrea Rodriguez. Additionally, The Morgan Lane award is voted on by the team, this year Zoe May (11).

Senior Lieutenant Tori Line, class of 2001, prepares to dance to "The Magnificent Seven" for the last time at her final Spring Show.

"I never thought I would end up being a teacher, let alone become a drill team director here. I feel very blessed to have spent the year with the team," she said

Now the new Showstopper director, Mrs. Tori Line Depriest sits in a circle with the team before the final Spring Show performance during the 35th reunion year. The seven seniors talk about their time on the team, and what they've learned by being a part of the group of girls that they've spent more time with the last four years than their own families.

"I spent two years of high school watching the girls in white dance, and I'm so thankful I got to dance with them my last two years of high school," Rebecca Leary (12) said. "It was still enough time to make a whole new family, and I will never forget the bond I have with this team."

They do each dance, knowing it's the last squad dance, last grade dance, and feeling so proud to be dancing to "One Sweet Day" in honor of Morgan Lane. The senior videos come on, and the team goes backstage, some getting ready to finish their first show, some their last.

"I was really excited because finishing my first show technically meant I wasn't a newbie anymore, but I was sad at the same time because I knew the seniors wouldn't be with us anymore," Callynn Roraff (9) said.

They enter the stage. The screen rises. The two spotlights go on. Tears roll down the girls' face, as the seven seniors perform "The Magnificent Seven" for the last time.

6. PERFORMING their class dance, the sophomores do an updated version to a dance from the past. "We had already done Sweet Dreams at a pep rally, but we added a bunch of new parts and separated it into groups to make it better for the stage," Halleie Parlin (10) said. [EBeck] 7. DANCING her part in the Britney Spears' pom dance, Madilyn Morse (11) smiles toward the crowd. "I really enjoyed getting to do the Britney dance because we learned it from the Dallas Cowboy Cheerleaders," she said. "It's always been a dream of mine to get to meet and dance with them." [EBeck]

SHOW what you know

For the Showstoppers, Spring Show goes beyond just a performance held each year

The Spring Show was not limited to dances performed by the girls. Emcees Krishab Bashyal (11) and Donald Whaley (11) also announced performance groups such as Winter Guard, as well as guest singer Hannah Rankin. "I was so thankful for the opportunity to sing at Spring Show because I don't get many chances to perform in front of my peers," Hannah said [EBeck]

5. SINGING "Reflector" from the Mulan sound track, Sophie Powell (11) belts out the chorus. "Once I had been on stage and sang in front of everyone I felt like I could do anything," Sophie said, "It gave me a huge confidence boost and made me realize I could do this."

it takes a lot of NERVE

Walk four steps. Don't trip. Face the crowd. Turn slowly. Smile big.

Junior Sophie Powell thinks through each step of her evening gown routine moments before she takes the stage during the Miss PGHS pageant.

"The nerves really got to me before taking the stage, but now that I have sang and performed in front of everyone I feel like I could do anything," Sophie said.

With only two of the contestants ever having been in a pageant, the girls only knew how the stereotypical TV-like pageants went. This called for a tremendous amount teamwork as everyone was doing something completely out of their comfort zones.

"For the opening number especially we really had to rely on each other. Caroline would gives cues for what we should do next and the stage managers were a huge help as we were coming off the stage and figuring out what to do next," Sophia Tuttlebee said.

Despite how nervous they were, all the girls could agree that after taking the stage for a few minutes, they slowly got more comfortable as the tension subsided. So by the time junior Jasmine Thomas was crowned Miss PGHS, the only thing she was feeling was shocked.

"When I found out I won I really couldn't believe it, my mind kind of went blank," Jasmine said. "After they called my name I just started looking for my family and stared at them in disbelief the whole time. But overall it was just a really happy moment that I wasn't expecting at all."

Winter, spring, summer, or fall; the varsity tennis team has been through it all

Sweating or freezing, the tennis team battled through tournaments all year. Ross Wyles' (12) bag would be filled with either shorts and sunscreen or sweatpants and handwarmers. No matter the season, the team managed to overcome it all as they took the fall district title and sent athletes to regionals and state in the spring.

FALL SEASON In Texas can be 90 degrees or more so it wasn't uncommon to see people passing out or feeling lightheaded.

"Anytime the sun is out, I put on sunscreen, whether it's hot or not. I just don't want to burn," Amy Lam (12) said.

The varsity team won district for the second straight year before losing in the area round.

SPRING SEASON is never the same as the semester before. In January through March it was a jaw dropping 27 degrees, with the high only 35 degrees.

"I bring hammocks and wrap myself in blankets to stay warm," Palmer Duke (11) said.

While snuggling up can be an option, others like the idea of walking around. "I like going around meeting people from other schools to stay active," Grant Mitchell (9) said.

Despite the weather and early morning struggles of getting enough sleep, the Hawks successfully completed a whole season of tournaments, before heading to district in April, where they won another title and sent the doubles team of Grant and Shannon Lee to state.

1. EYES on the ball, George Douglas (11) gets ready to hit a volley at the PG tournament. "I try to hit my volleys hard either down the line or at the opponents when I get into the game," he said. [GPickelman] 2. GETTING down low, Clerk Giles (12) prepares to send his forehand over the net during his third place match against Sulphur Springs. "Most of the time I try to hit the ball hard and deep in the back corners since it's hard for my opponents to get them," he said. "Sometimes I'll even hit someone." [HKnight] 2. SHARING a joke, Grace Higgins (12) and Caroline Joyce (11) take a moment to shake things off against Liberty Eyleau. "Our jokes and pep talks are reassuring and help us relax when we are down," Grace said. [HKnight]

4. CLEARING her mind, Shannon Lee (12) gets ready for the next game against L-E at the fall district meet. "Knowing my partner isn't as experienced as I am, it's my job to cover the spots she can't get to," she said. 5. HAVING a laugh, August Riggs (10) and Dillon Toler (12) watch other matches. "When I'm off the court, I free my mind of stress by bonding with teammates or listening to my airpods," Dillon said. 6. FIRST UP, Palmer Duke (11) serves to the L-E team. "When I serve, I remember to add spin to the ball. It helps me keep the ball in and just get a lot of shots back," he said. [JPickelman]

"I like knowing that I was giving back to kids who aren't fortunate to have access to the everyday things we have."

"We don't always need to have a special occasion to just hand out donuts." [MOKC]

Avery Jensen (12) demonstrates proper handling to new Interact members. Students in Interact ran regular routes around PG to put out both Hawk flags and American flags. "I learned that there is a lot more that goes into handling flags than you would think," she said. "You have to pay attention to how you're holding so you don't hit someone and how to roll it so you don't crease the flag." [CWatlington]

Holding signs for Race for the Cure, a group of Kayettes members cheer on runners as they near the finish line. "This was probably my favorite part because I felt good giving people encouragement to finish the race," Selena Lam (11) said. "We got a late start because the posters were locked in a classroom and then we stood on a random corner downtown not knowing where to go or what to do." [Submitted]

PACK a PUNCH

Our Students are making a difference and packing a punch in the community, school, clubs, sports, activities, and more.

BRIGHT AND EARLY:

On a Friday morning, Andrew Barkman (12) wakes up and heads to school but not because he has a class—as part of the Interact club flags, he helps put up the PG flags around town.

"I really enjoyed doing the flag routes because you get to be with your friends early in the morning. We are all so tired and delirious that we are always in a good mood," he said, "I joined Interact because it's my senior year and I want to make the most of it by doing as much as I can in the community."

UP ALL NIGHT:

Setting up for the Miss PGHS pageant, Hannah Feeser (11) makes sure everything is in place and everyone is doing their job for that Saturday night.

"My favorite part was getting to do Mrs. PGHS because the work you do can help when you are trying to get a job in the future," she said, "Being in Kayettes has benefitted me by giving me the experience of volunteering and helping out with school events."

IN THE HALLS:

Taylor Grimm (11) hangs up her art in the hallways along with other student pieces as she sets up for the Annual Art Show.

"I decided to join Art Club because I wanted to be involved in something other than band and color guard, and it was the only club that had a flexible schedule for me," she said, "My favorite part of Art Club is being able to work the Children's Christmas Workshop and to help with all the little kids involved."

BE EVERYWHERE:

From the football field to out in the community, Miller Hornsby (12) tried to find new ways to get involved inside and out of school. "I joined Student Council because of my interest in government and to make the school and all of the activities more fun," he said, "My favorite part about being on Student Council is the flexibility and the perspective of the school."

MADILYN MORSE (10) "My favorite part was being able to make my own snow come since I worked it. The weather was perfect so it made it even more enjoyable to eat."

CARSON SANDERS (10) "I really enjoyed being apart of the cleanup crew for Race for a Cure because it was for such a great cause and I'm always happy to give back to my community."

MARVIN BUTLER (9) "I went to Race for the Cure for Stuxo because they needed help for the clean up crew so I happily volunteered. I loved being a part of such a great community service project."

From perfecting makeup to setting up, theater students always have a task at hand

1. HANGING the lights, Stella Angerer (11) decorates for "Seussical," the fall musical. "It's always really exciting getting ready for the play but it's also really stressful," Stella said. [G Higgins] 2. TRANSFORMING Clay Jones (10) into his character of the Wickersham Captain for "Seussical," Reagan Adam (12) and Hannah Feiser (11) work on his makeup. "It's always really weird and uncomfortable for me because you have like 20 people around you poking at your face," Clay said. [P Pasonghong]

BE the photographer

Gracie Higgins (12) & Abby Yowell (10)
"As a photographer, I get a front row view of everything going on in the game. Especially being close to people on the teams is a really cool experience," Gracie said. [Charrle]

1. TALKING with manager James Higgins (12), Baylie McMillan (12) watches the game for any injuries. "I get an adrenaline rush when someone gets hurt or I see someone fall. It's so much fun knowing I'm doing what I love but also helping people too," he said. [E Beck] 2. PREPARING for a time out, Anyessa Williams (11) fills up the water bottles for the players. "Sports medicine is really fun because you learn about all the injuries and have experiences that help you understand it more and more," she said. [G Higgins]

They may have been behind the scenes, but trainers, photographers, stage managers and club members were everywhere did you SEE them?

STARTING LINEUP

Before every game, sports medicine students are gearing up for what they need for the six and a half hours ahead.

"We all have a certain check list and packing list for our 'med kits.' They have things Ms. Scott might need during the game, like scissors, band-aids, tape, pre-wrap and power plex," Emily Hilton (12) said. "We all have to make sure everything is checked off for the game."

Although the students are trained and certified, some still get nervous in big events.

"It does get a little nerve wracking when you're on the sidelines at the game and you see someone get hurt because you have to prepare mentally for what you have to do," Emily said.

"You can't let your nerves get the best of you to the point where it affects what you're doing."

INTERMISSION

During a theater performance, a lot can happen, both on or off the stage.

"When I am in the middle of the performance

I only think about what my character's personality is like. I also stay in character until the show is over," Clay Jones (10) said. "There are a lot of times when someone says the wrong line and you just have to react the way you think that character would react. Even if something happens in the audience that is so distracting to us, we just have to go on with the show."

Off stage, crew members are working to get props together and make sure costumes are waiting for a quick change.

AFTER THE LAST BUZZER

Long after players, fans and coaches have left the field, STUCO members stay behind to clean up the stands.

"It's so weird to say but it is actually so much fun running around with a bunch of trash bags everywhere cleaning up the whole stadium with your friends," Kyra Knowles (11) said, "even if it was after a long game and everyone else has gone home."

3. HURRYING off the field, Jasmine Thomas (11) goes back to the sidelines to wrap an ankle. "While the game is going on, I focus on the players and how they fall. I used to get really nervous when I first started doing Sports Medicine, but you just have to remind yourself to be calm and that everything is fine," she said. [G Higgins] 4. HIDING in the jungle of Knool, Abbie Flournoy (10) helps to make the PAC into a whole new world. "In Leadership we basically just helped everyone decorate when they didn't have enough people or if they are rushing to get things done. I liked to help because it relieved stress from the theater teachers," Abbie said. [Thicks] 5. HELPING in the training room, Emily Hilton (12) focuses on treating one of many students who come in during athletics. "I love being one of the Sports Medicine Trainers because everyday you learn something new, and it's so exciting to actually do what you are being taught," she said. [Spickelman]

BE THE MASTER

Sophomore boys contribute to the varsity team

At the District Tournament, sophomore Mac Capps waits on the putting green. "I always get very nervous because I want to do good for my team so I try my best to be the best golfer out there," he said. [PPasonghong]

Eye on the ball, sophomore Brett Cammony prepares for his backswing. "I get really focused on my shot. I make sure everything is lined up, so the ball will go down the fairway and to the hole," Brett said. [GHiggins]

Standing on the green, sophomore Reed Buck watches his teammates at the final hole. "I also pay attention to the people I'm going against so I know what I have to get to win," Reed said. [PPasonghong]

Senior remember the past, focus on the present as they advance to regionals

And then there were two. Two seniors and a retiring coach.

As the only two seniors on the team, Allison Jones and Jackson Giles went through every practice, tournament and team bonding trip together since the beginning of their high school career.

Though players have come and gone in the past, these two have stuck it out together, along with their coach, Rick Rogers.

"We've spent so much time together that it's hard to even think about not going to practice with each other after school every day," Jackson said. "It'll definitely be something I'll have to get used to."

But golf didn't only create long lasting friendships. With her consecutive district wins as an individual and team player, Allison took away more than just golf tactics and skill.

"Throughout these past four years, golf has taught me that whatever has happened in the past I need to let it go and focus on what's coming next," she said.

With the season's end quickly approaching, these seniors, coach Rogers, and the rest of the team had to forget about the unraveling loss they were already feeling and get back on the practice grind.

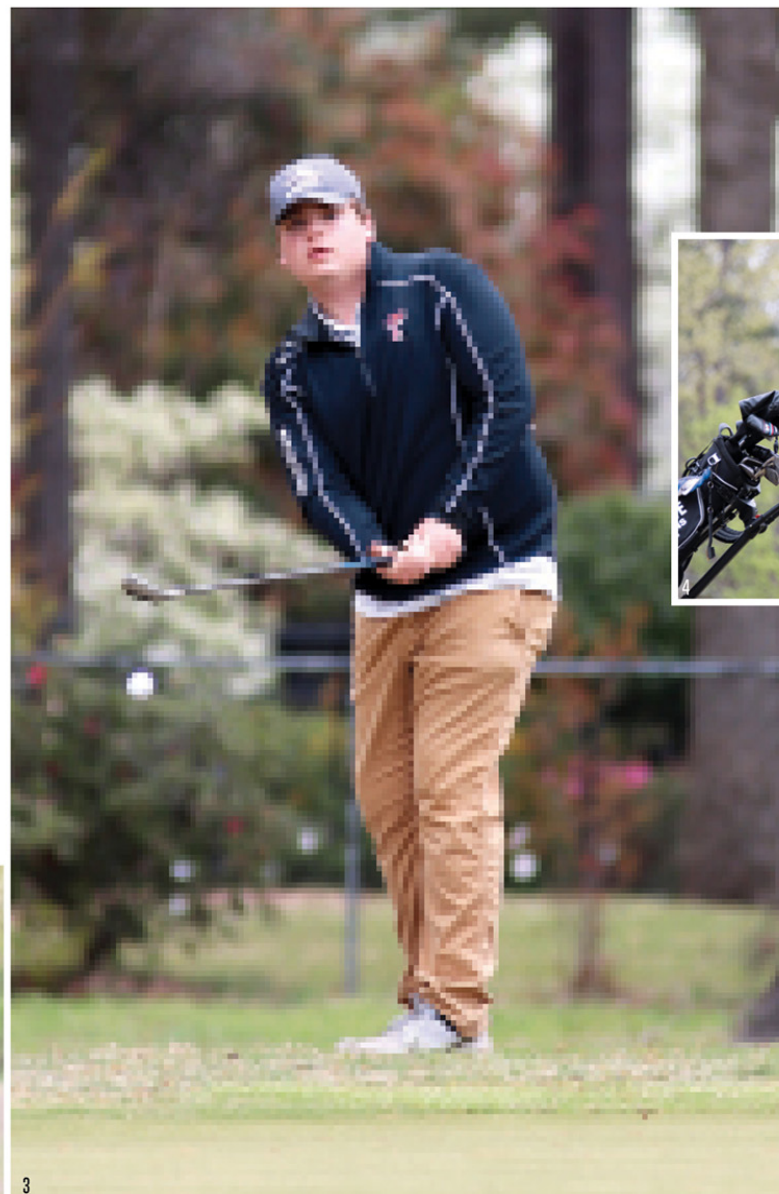

"We kind of had to put aside the sad thoughts of losing the people that had been such a big part of our lives for the past eight months," Addison Simmons (9) said. "It was difficult because I am so close with Allison, but I just had to put my head back in the game and practice like never before."

Through it all, the girls became district champs and regional qualifiers with Allison as overall district champion and Jackson advancing to regionals on the boys' side. The two seniors and coach Rogers went out with a bang.

"I was happy I could be a part of something so special," Taylor Hicks (10) said. "And also to see the impact that each, Allison, Jackson and coach Rogers made on each and every one of us."

1. TAKING a win at the district tournament at Sulphur Springs Country Club, Coach Gina Clark, Allison Jones (12), Coach Rick Rogers, Taylor Hicks (10), Seth McNeal (11), and Addison Simmons (9) show off their awards. "Overall Allison shot a good score for the girls to pull out a win," Taylor Hicks (10) said. "I think she and the rest of us are getting better with each tournament and it shows."

2. AFTER teeing off, Jackson Giles (12) takes off his glove. "Tournaments are nerve wracking so the longer you're out there, it gets hot," he said. "I like to take my gloves off as soon as I can so I don't have to worry about my hands being all sweaty." [PPasonghong] 3. CHIPPING off, Mac Capps (10) watches if the ball lands on the green. "When I get close to the green I focus on setting it up to make it easy when I put," he said. [PPasonghong]

4. KEEPING track of his strokes, Whitt Addington (10) fills in his scorecard at the District Golf Tournament. "It's important to keep track of how good each of us do so we can work on getting better each par," he said. 5. BEFORE teeing off, Allison Jones (12) practices her swing. "I don't worry too much about the score, but the way I hit each shot," she said. [PPasonghong]

Prom started early and ended the next day with lots of pics and naps in between

PROM PROS

BE THE DAMSEL IN DISTRESS:

Everything was set. Pictures downtown. A hair appointment. The perfect dress. Nothing could ruin junior Phoebe Robertson's prom night. Except for the rain and humidity that drifted in that afternoon.

"My date really came in and saved the day because the ground was wet and I didn't want to ruin it before the dance even started," she said. "I was really starting to stress about my dress getting soaked and muddy before we even got to take pictures and my hair was already getting frizzy and started falling down."

BE THE FIRST ONE ON THE DANCE FLOOR:

Once all the pictures were done, it was finally time to get the party started. Senior Brooklyn Bearden arrived and immediately tried to convince some of her friends to join her on the dance floor. "Since it was my senior prom and I didn't have a date, I wanted to make the most of it," she said. "I wanted to go dance so I started walking, hoping my friends were following me but they weren't. It took a good five minutes to get them out there with me."

BE THE GAMBLER:

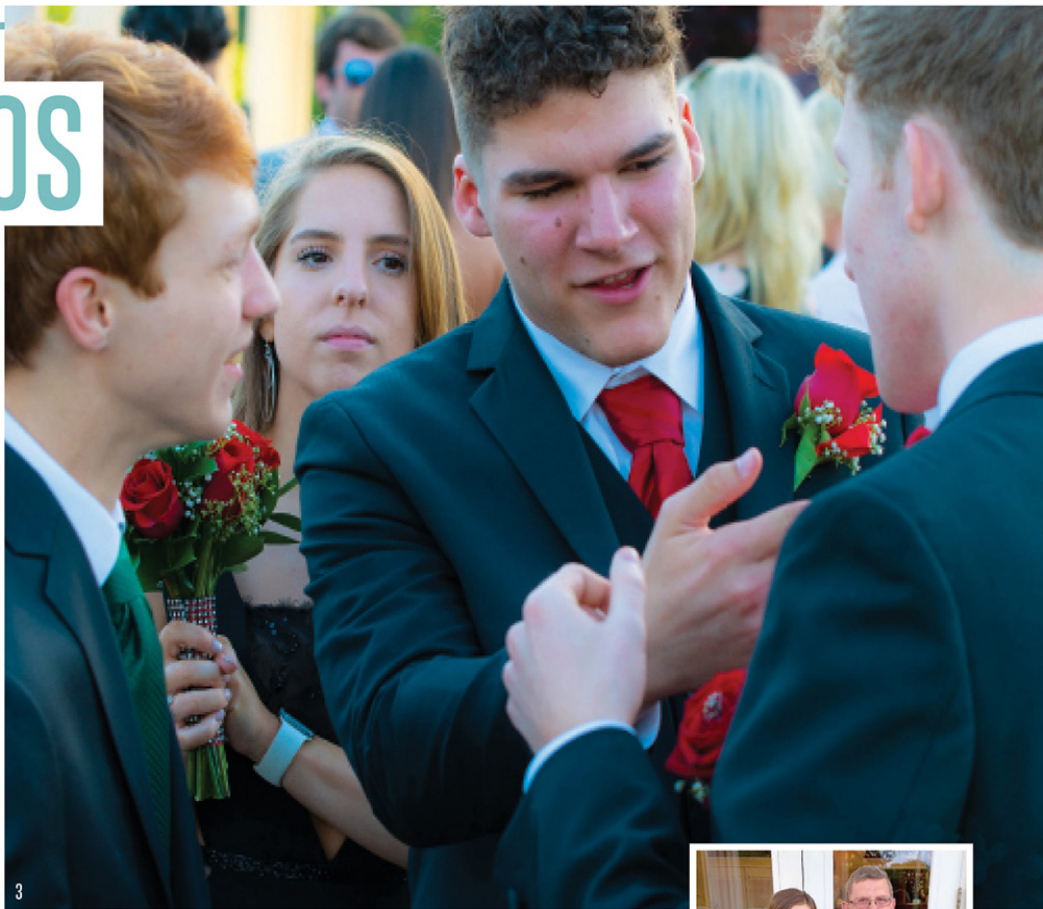

Casino night is all fun and games, especially when the auction and the bidding starts. Senior Kadin Booker spotted the Keurig coffee machine, and with only $540 worth of chips, he only had one solution: walk to the front of the room and bet all of it in hopes no one would take away from him.

"I really wanted to win something but since I didn't have a lot of chips, I had to convince everyone to let me have it," he said. "I thought I was gonna go home empty handed but I went home with a coffee machine."

BE THE ONE UP ALL NIGHT:

After staying up until 3 a.m., there was still more to do. Senior Laura Beth Maddox hopped in a car with a couple of friends and headed straight for the lake.

"We went to Lake Greason on my houseboat, and we were all pretty tired since we only got close to three hours of sleep," she said. "My favorite part was riding around and watching Joseph Killetry try to get up on a surfboard."

"I love playing blackjack because you never know what cards you'll get," he said. "It's a game that gets your heart rate going. I ended up winning about 500 chips." 2. LOOKING at sophomore Holly Thornton's flowers, Rachel Hemphill (11) takes pictures before the dance. "Taking pictures is always a lot of fun because I always like to see everyone all dressed up," she said. "It's always nice to see everyone out of the typical school clothes scenario." 3. ALL DRESSED up, Zach Gane (12) and Dillon Toler (12) fix each other's buttonholes while they stand outside waiting to go into the country club. "We had to adjust them because Patrick's was really crooked," he said. "My senior prom was definitely the best one because of my date and the food at casino night." 4. WAITING to see if she won anything, Kyle Pinson (11) plays Russian Roulette with senior Madi Morris. "I ended up winning about 2,000 chips from just playing that all night," she said. "I kept winning so I didn't see a point in playing anything else." 5. ON the porch before the dance, Macy Young (10) poses with Assistant Principal Robert Goline for a quick picture. "I always talk to Mr. Goline at school," Macy said. "So when I saw him at the dance I had to take a picture with him." 6. HOPING to get a little help from the dealer (her dad, Dr. Gary Old), Mary Old (12) and Lora Davis (12) watch while Bryce Green and Miller Hamsey (12) place their bets at the blackjack table. "He actually did give my friends and me a little extra help, telling us when not to take another card," Mary said. "Some people wouldn't listen to him and they'd bust. It was pretty funny." (nCook)

"It was fun being able to help the young kids launch 'rockets' and see how happy it made them," Natalie Nicholson (10) said. [TBock]

SURPRISE RETIREMENT PARTY

"On the last day of school, we surprised Mr. [Robert] Goline with a 600 Hall party because he always supports what our students do in theater, art and journalism and enjoys hanging out with us," theater teacher Debbie Sutton said. [PRobertson]

DISTRICT-WIDE TEACHER LUNCHEON

"I really enjoyed helping serve at the teacher luncheon. I loved being able to see and talk to my former teachers," Olivia Rochelle (11) said. [PRobertson]

the ENDING is near

It's the first of May. The end is in sight but there are still plenty of things to do.

FOUR WEEKS TO GO:

Awards Assembly. Best Week Ever. Baseball games. Top 25% Banquet.

I was really excited for that week—it was the week where a lot of things were going on and school was coming to an end," Shannon Lee (12) said. "The week leading up to the awards everyone was asking teachers who was getting the Hall of Fame, but I wasn't paying much attention. I knew I was going to get something because you always get a letter before to make sure you show up, but I was surprised when I got the Hall of Fame for math."

THREE WEEKS TO GO:

AP Tests. Day after prom. Graduation parties. And more graduation parties.

"I was pretty annoyed that we had to take an AP test at 8 a.m. after prom weekend," Caleb Hemphill (12) said, "but the test ended up being easier than I thought and I went home right after so I didn't mind it as much."

"The entire week before my calculus test I didn't get hardly any sleep because I was up studying every night until probably 2 a.m.," Preston Allen (12) said.

TWO WEEKS TO GO:

Senior Finals. Leadership field trip. Teacher Appreciation Week.

"Finals for senior year had their ups and downs—the downs being that they were the hardest classes I've ever had to take finals over (trust me—tons of mental breakdowns) but somehow it was easier because we could exempt a lot more exams," Cage Watlington (12) said. "It felt like a reward for all the years of exams we took."

FIVE DAYS TO GO

Tennis party. Baccalaureate. Senior Week. Teacher Luncheon:

"The senior walks were a great way to see where we all came from and they gave me a walk down memory lane for me and everyone with me who went to PG K-12," Maggie Watlington (12) said. "It was nice to just remember before we go on our separate ways."

1. TOP 25% honoree Alana Award (12) watches as Mrs. Allison Morris speaks about her contributions to theater over the past four years. "It meant a lot going to the Top 25% Banquet because it shows how hard I worked over the last four years," Alana said. "I was glad Mrs. Morris got to come with me because she has been one of my teachers every year of high school and has helped me grow up a lot." [submitted] 2. FLIPPING through their elementary yearbook, seniors Clark Giles, Lauren Hughes, Hannah Snyder and Madi Morris laugh at their pictures with their former teacher, Mrs. Allison Jones. "It was just weird being inside the school because I haven't been there in years, but it felt like just yesterday I was in third grade," Madi said. [CJoyce] 3. SEATED at the front, seniors Shannon Lee, Sophia Tuttlebee, Katie Hutcherson and Natalie Hale wait for the journalism banquet to begin. "It was both sad and weird attending my last banquet," Katie said. "Knowing it was my last banquet made it evident that I wouldn't get to work with the amazing staff again, and it was another reminder that everything was changing." [PRobertson]

4. IN FRONT of the middle school, seniors clad in caps and gowns wait for the photographer to take their group picture after waking halls lined with students. "The senior walks were a great way to round up the school year by seeing the schools where we learned it all," Cage Watlington (12) said. 5. WAITING to bowl, seniors put their names in for separate lanes at Holiday Bowl. After walking through the halls of the elementary and middle schools on Monday and Tuesday, seniors were bussed to the bowling alley for a day of fun. [CJoyce]

Leaving friends is one thing, but the built-in friend down the hall is another.

RYAN AND GRACE PICKELMAN

"I like that we are going to the same college because I know he has my back and we help each other out," Grace said. [SLam]

CAGE AND MAGGIE WATLINGTON

"I'm nervous about us going to two separate colleges because I have been with her all my life and it's going to be a big change without her by my side next year," Cage said. [CWatlington]

SETH AND SYDNEY HOPKINS

"College is definitely going to be an adjustment for us. We are used to seeing each other everyday and hang out with the same friends," Sydney said. "Both of us will be busy doing activities we love but I hope we can stay in touch," Sydney said. [SHopkins]

The last HOORAH

From the beginning of the year, 169 seniors counted down the days, minutes, then seconds until the end

It had been marked on the calendar from the beginning of the year: graduation, May 24. And for most of the 169 seniors, it was something they had been thinking about for four years, if not 12. However, for those who got to wear the black and white K-12 cord, they had been thinking about their PGHS graduation for 13 years.

"It's kind of sad because I'm not able to see the people I've grown up with for many years since we are going our different ways," Chandra Adams said. "But it is also exciting to go to college and experience something new."

But when it was actually time to walk across the stage, for Brendan Plank it really didn't seem that real.

"Having multiple practices was useful because it showed us where to start and what the timing would be like for when we needed to walk," he said. "I was calm at graduation until I had to walk across the stage and get my diploma. That's when I actually realized I was graduating."

And besides, after two practices and a baccalaureate service it just seemed like any other event. However, for some, graduation was just a check off of their bucket list.

"I am really glad it is over. I went through so much pressure and effort trying to work towards my diploma, and it's nice to finally have accomplished it after what seems like forever," Codie Lawing said. "There are some parts I'll miss, but I'm just glad to be done."

The day came and went, from lining up in the atrium of First Baptist Church to turning their tassels and finally tossing their caps in the air. As they took pictures on the crowded sidewalk and parking lot outside, seniors like Denish Pokhrel realized that his feelings had changed now that the countdown was finally over.

"Walking across the stage in the end changed my attitude about graduating. I was excited at the beginning of the day then bittersweet afterward," Denish said. "I'll remember the long bonds and friendships I had in high school as I experience college. One thing ends and another begins."

1. THREE BEST FRIENDS Mathew Teague, Garrett Young, and Dillon Toler take a picture together before the ceremony. "I know that I'll see my friends again, but now I have to focus on myself through the transition of life," Mathew said. [Joyce] 2. IN THE END The top 10, Zach Iglesias, Miller Hornsby, Shannon Lee, Katie Hutcherson, Natalie Hale, Amalia Bradley, Ryan Engstrom, Patrick McMillan, Maggie Watlington, and Brooklynn Bearden pose for a picture. "Graduating felt like an amazing accomplishment, for me," Natalie said. "The top 10 all worked hard to get where we are and each of us deserved it." [Joyce] 3. SNAPPING A SELFIE Cassidy Bunker and Allison Jones try to get the whole Class of 2019 in the picture. "I even created a 'PG Graduation' Snapchat story where people could post things in it," Allison said. [AJones] 4. WITH BALDWIN LEADING the traditional cap toss, seniors signal the end of their high school career outside First Baptist Church. "The cap toss is something to remember after high school," Kaylen Patel said. "That's when you realize you're finally done with school." [Joyce] 5. WAITING TO RECEIVE their diplomas, Brooklyn Ash, Erica Austin, and Alana Avard stand with mixed emotions. "I feel like we shouldn't be old enough to graduate but I'm ready to move off to college and make new friends," Alana said. [Joyce]

ZACH IGLESIA

"I felt I had a responsibility to represent my class. Although I was anxious, I knew whatever I said would reach at least one person and that was my goal." [Thomas]

HAILEY WHITTEN

"I was so nervous the whole night. I have a fear of public speaking and I'm just grateful I didn't fall or mess up." [Joyce]

MILLER HORNSBY

"It was nerve racking because I've never spoken to such a big audience. I wanted to make a good impression on my graduating class and community." [Joyce]

BE the SENIOR

Seniors discover that the big year doesn't always live up to expectations

Natalie Hale
"Senioritis is a REAL thing. When did I study for my statistics test? This morning. What did I know on my statistics test? Nothing," she said.

Lauren Holland
"It's been really surreal," she said. "It kind of blows my mind that I'm a senior and I'm about to graduate."

Joseph Killett
"I can finally get out of Texarkana and move onto bigger things," he said.

Nathan Jennings
"You expect to be the leader and the big man on campus," he said. "It's not like that at all."

MAKING sure the cap fits, Victoria Haley helps Kayla Cooks gather her cap and gown centered. "When we first got our caps and gowns, nothing had set in yet. I just couldn't believe that was it. My head was full of memories and emotions that I hadn't taken into fact that I was never coming back to high school," Kayla said. [JThomas]

I'll CATCH you...

From being chauffeurs to being on the fields to attending camps, seniors checking things off their bucket lists

ON THE ROAD

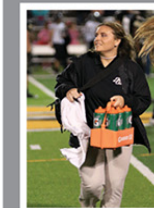

WHAT DO YOU AS A JOB?

"I'm sort of like an Uber. I pick people up from around town and take them to wherever they need to go," Clark Giles said.

WHAT IS THE HARDEST PART OF THE JOB?

"The hardest thing is making sure I'm on time. Since I'm by myself, sometimes it can be difficult to make it to all the parties I need to get to at the right time," he said. [JThomas]

RUNNING OFF THE SIDELINES

WHAT DO YOU WANT TO BE IN SPORTS MEDICINE?

"I have always had an interest in the medical field. When I discovered the Sports Medicine program I knew that it was something for me," Emily Hilton said.

WHAT WILL YOU MISS THE MOST?

"What I will miss most is riding in the van with Ms. Scott and all the trainers to the football games. We would sing at the top of our lungs, while annoying Ms. Scott," she said. [JThomas]

PACKING FOR COLLEGE

WHAT COLLEGES DID YOU VISIT?

"I visited four colleges. My mom and I did like a four day long road trip to visit all of the colleges," Amelia Bradley said.

WHY DID YOU PICK TEXAS A&M?

"I chose A&M because it felt like home. I felt like it had the potential to give me endless opportunities to learn and grow. I am ready to be a part of the Apple family and all of their traditions," she said. [submitted]

STAR IN A REMAKE OF "THE OFFICE"

"I assume I was voted as the ginger or Dwight," Ryan Engstrom said. "I think because of my dorky demeanor or my goody-two-shoes, but then again I have never even seen the show to know."

WEAR SHORTS AND FLIP FLOPS ALL YEAR

"Everyone said I was crazy for wearing shorts and flip flops on the day it slightly snowed," Brandon Plank said. "I mean you've got to enjoy the cool weather before the summer heat wave."

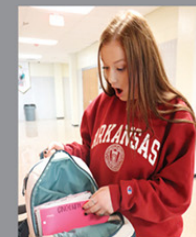

BEST ROMANCE

"Keaton Russo and I have been best friends for a long time and we do everything together and have all of our classes together," Seth Hopkins said. "I consider us to have a romance because we have our good days and our bad days like a real romance."

DROP THEIR PHONE IN THE TOILET

"When I was told I won this superlative, I wasn't surprised at all," Allison Jones said. "With my clumsy personality, I wouldn't be surprised when it does happen in the future because I always drop my stuff no matter what it is."

WIN THE LOTTERY THEN LOSE THE TICKET

"I'm known for being very irresponsible, but I didn't know enough for people to vote me as that," Haley Whitten said.

GET SQUIRTED BY MRS. MAC'S SPRAY BOTTLE

"I never pay attention because I always talk and bug her like by unplugging her mouse and put tape on it," Brett Walker said. "I used to sleep a lot and it's scary to get sprayed because you're gonna be wet all day."

GET A SPEEDING TICKET

"I did not expect to get that exactly because the only tickets that I have ever got I have gotten out of or it has been just a warning. Part of me understands why I got voted for this because I am always driving around fast," Clark Giles said.

BE AT SONIC

"There isn't a day where Brooklynn Bearden and I don't go to Sonic and get our usual orders," Cage Watlington said. "It's gotten to the point where the workers know our names and come up and talk to us about our day."

time for a CHANGE

There are a lot of changes about a person from sophomore to senior year, but sometimes they can lead to a glowup.

Brooklyn Ash
"I have better study habits, and I make sure to stay on top of all of my classes. The changes have been important because now I feel ready for college," she said.

Noni Hilley
"My biggest changes were in my confidence and leadership skills. These traits are so important because they have lead me to amazing opportunities like shadowing at St. Michaels and becoming a counselor for the RYLA leadership camp," she said.

Miller Hornsby
"I've become more disciplined because of the challenges that football and my junior year classes put me through," he said.

JUNIORS ready TO BE there

As Health Science teacher Stephanie Scott instructs him, Harry Overlock (11) practices taking blood.

Harry Overlock has a plan. His entire college and career pathway is planned out. He has wanted to be an internist for as long as he can remember.

An internist is a doctor that specializes in internal medicine. Being an internist means he gets to help people and that is what motivates him the most.

"I feel like I have been put on this earth to help people any way that I can," Harry said.

However Harry has some tough shoes to follow in; both of his parents are in the medical field. His mother is a psychologist and his father is an internist at Wadley.

"I've always known I wanted to be a doctor because of my dad, and my mom has always pushed me in that direction," Harry said.

Harry has already been taking many classes to help him prepare for college and getting into medical school. He takes job shadowing, health modules, anatomy, and principles of health sciences.

Harry Overlock plans on attending college at Texas A&M Texarkana for his biology degree, and dreams of moving to California for medical school.

"I want to go to college in California because my family and I go there once a year, and I feel like the beach would be the best stress reliever after a long day of work at the hospital," he said.

Harry not only likes studying biology but is very involved in the drum line. He is set on continuing to play music beyond high school.

"I hope to get into a summer band program called Drum Core and so I may be able to get a band scholarship," Harry said.

Harry has his life planned out and is prepared to take on life after high school.

LILLY ALLISON

All about ART

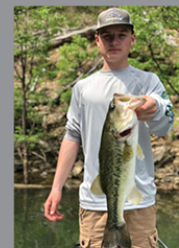

Lilly Allison plans on going to college for an art degree. "I want to be an art teacher because what else am I going to do with art," Lilly said. "My mom is a teacher, so I grew up around the lifestyle of teaching." Lilly likes the idea of having summers off with her family and that is what she looks forward to.

TYLESIA GOINS

All about TENNIS

Tyleshia Goins has been playing tennis for a year now. "I will only go to college for tennis if I can get a good scholarship for it," Tyleshia said. "Tennis is really fun, but I don't know if I want to spend my whole college experience having to play." Tyleshia wants to focus on her grades in college and getting her degree.

PARKER THOMAS

All about FISHING

Parker Thomas has been fishing since he was able to walk. "I like fishing because it is a really good challenge, and I enjoy it," Parker said. He does not want to work to get a scholarship in fishing. "There is not a lot of money in it and it is a very unsafe path because there are not many careers available," Parker said. Parker wants to play it safe and get a degree in engineering.

what's on your LOCK SCREEN?

Sergio Rodriguez

"I picked this picture for my lockscreen because it is of me and my girlfriend. I wanted to think of her everytime I opened my phone," said Sergio.

Luke Mueller

"Me and my girlfriend have been dating for a year and she goes to school at Red Water, so just me opening my phone gives me a little reminder of her," said Luke.

Mica Taylor

"I have this picture as my lockscreen because everytime I look at my phone I want to see a good memory with my friend and think about how fun that trip was," said Mica.

Mikayla Crenshaw

"Zoe is my good friend and I like this picture," said Mikayla. "It reminds me of happy times with her on one of the best days and I remember it like it was yesterday."

Jackson Cobb

"It is me and my mom at the state championship, and it makes me feel good that my mom was there watching me and that she cared about me when I cried after the game," said Jackson.

Kathryn Davis

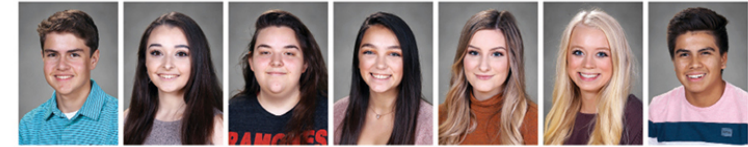

"Some pictures clash with the time and date on my phone, so I color coordinate my background so that the date and time pop out," said Kathryn.

PUT it in DRIVE

Driving is one of the things students look forward to the most in high school. Almost all juniors have the privilege to drive themselves place to place.

George Douglas

"I like to drive because I like to race people. I like the adrenalin rush it gives me," George said. "My car is different because my top can come off and it is good in the summer. I can feel the wind in my hair and get a nice beach vibe." [KDavis]

Presley Hargrove

"I do enjoy my Lincoln. It is definitely a mom car. It has a lot of room, so I can carry all my friends around. When I am babysitting I have enough room for all the kids," Presley said. "I like to drive because I like to be on time and being able to drive means I don't have to depend on others to get me where I need to be." [KDavis]

Mikki Pope

"I like that it is different from everyone else's. Nobody in the school has one. There are only a few others in Texarkana and I think it makes me stand out. I like being able to drive because it gives me freedom. I don't have to worry about finding a ride to all my extracurricular activities," Mikki said. [KDavis]

Connor Hornsby

"My car is different from other cars because it came from Shreveport, so it is not from around here. There is not a dealership in Texarkana. I like to drive because of the freedom I get. Driving makes me feel carefree," Connor said. [KDavis]

"Being positive makes the day go by faster and puts everyone around me in a better mood. It makes you more thankful for everything you have," Rachel said. [Submitted]

SOPHOMORES, a force TO BE reckoned with

Sophomores do more than just homework—they find unique hobbies to keep themselves busy

Gillian Knowles

Gillian suits up for every football practice and game, but not to play. She spends most of her free time on the field with the Sports Medicine program. "I want to go into orthopedic surgery and that's mainly what we do," Gillian said. "I'm also in debate, so I'm pretty much at this school until dark." But she hasn't had to do it alone. She has the other members of Sports Medicine that are with her at every game. "Most of my friends are in sports med, so it makes the time go by faster," Gillian said. "I don't have much time for any other hobbies outside of school with all of my classes and homework. At the end of the day, I've learned a lot and it will help me in the future." [Submitted]

Whitney Derrick

While most sophomores are just getting their license, Whitney Derrick (10) had been driving for four years. Well, driving in a race car. "I started out watching [racing], and started getting really into it. Then we bought a car on a whim and my dad drove it," Whitney said. "He got injured, so he had to have me drive it. I just fell in love with it. We just kept on buying cars and [racing]." She doesn't just race them. She builds them. "[My car] is an older car, a 2003 Cavalier LS that we stripped down," Whitney said. "We put a new motor in it, knocked the windows out, and just stripped it down to everything but its body. Then we put new mechanics in it." [Submitted]

Lauren Stinard

Lauren is definitely more than meets the eye. Not only is she a part of Curtain Call productions, she is a singer/songwriter, and an artist. She played the Wickerson Sister in Seussical and sang an original song in the Follies. "I play the guitar and the ukulele most of the time, but I always like to push myself to learn other instruments," Lauren said. "I took lessons for a semester, then I taught myself the rest of what I know." She also uses a lot of different art mediums. She does everything from painting clay sculptures to using pastels to add color to her art. "I try to not let myself get bored," she said, "I teach myself different things that I think would be fun to learn." [Pasonhong]

Lawson Lee

Instead of heading to a football practice or a club meeting, Lawson chooses to spend his time at an animal shelter. He and his grandmother volunteer at a no-kill shelter in Texarkana. They wanted to volunteer their time at a place that needed as many helpers as possible. He saw a need in the community and instead of sitting around, he took action. "They are a non-profit, so all the money and time is donated by the community," Lawson said. "We figured that they needed it, so we decided to go and ask what we could do." He not only gets to spend time with pups in need, but also with his grandmother. [Submitted]

BE trendy

Jeans or leggings? Shorts or sweatpants? These were the decisions students had to make every morning before school.

Delaynie Keeney
"I have athletics in the morning so I try to dress up since I can't really curl my hair and put a whole face of makeup on." [G Higgins]

ALL DENIM

Denim became a bigger trend, but Delaynie Keeney (her first name is Denim—really) brought it to school in a different way. She dressed up her denim dress with a red top, tights and some booties.

Abby Davidson
"Leggings are more comfortable than jeans, so that's why I wear them. They also are easy to dress up or down." [G Higgins]

LEGGINGS EVERYDAY

Leggings were one staple were most sophomores. Girls wore them daily for comfort and style. Abby Davidson styled her leggings with a jacket and a t-shirt.

Reid Bingham
"I wear pullovers because they're easy to throw on. They also keep me warm in class." [G Higgins]

PULLOVER SEASON

Pullovers were essential during winter, especially in the freezing classrooms at school. Reid Bingham was no exception. He had a lot of pullovers that he wore to school.

I would describe sophomore year as _____.
(terrible, ehk okay I guess, best year ever)

It is (the last answer you circled) because _____.
(there's too much homework, I get to see my friends, I love my classes)

My favorite part about sophomore year was _____.
(joining clubs, not the newbie anymore, 3:40)

One thing I learned this year was _____.
(it's easy to get into a wreck in the parking lot, studying is key, it went by too fast)

DRESSED as Sneezy, Ashton Waddell winks with a float during the homecoming pep rally. "It was fun dressing up and helping Dawson [Hattfield] with her float," Ashton said.

being in the KNOW

BINGE worthy

Winter break, spring break, any break meant time for more binge watching of Netflix favorites

YOU
You is a suspenseful Netflix series that captivated sophomores from the time it came out. It has romance and mystery. It was a show that they could binge at school and home.

RIVERDALE
Romance. Mystery. Drama. Riverdale is about high school students who try to live normal lives, while also fighting the bad guys. It appeals to sophomores because it's like their lives with a twist.

stay in TUNE

Air pods or ear buds? Spotify or Apple Music? Whatever or however, sophomores listened to trending music

Speechless
"I listen to it when I want to be in a good mood," Ella Nichols said. "I'm up set, my go to music is country."

Seven Rings
"I listen to 'Seven Rings' because I like the beat of it and the lyrics behind it," Jennifer Zamora said.

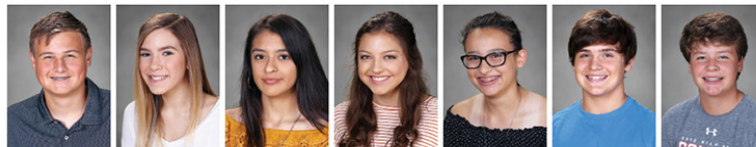

Mo Bamba
"I like the fact that it makes noise," Noah Rayburn said. "I have a playlist of nothing but Mo Bamba and Sicko Mode when I want to have fun."

SCHOOL MOM (and home mom)

From math teachers to principals, sophomores' parents are scattered throughout the school

Some students walk out of the front door in the mornings and don't plan to see their parents till 3:40 in the afternoon. But that's not the case if your parent is a teacher. These students see their parents all day long.

Chad Haidet & Mrs. Barbie Haidet

"I have my mom for geometry and like having her, but sometimes she tries to embarrass me," Chad said. "I go in her class between periods when I have time to talk to her." (G Higgins)

Mrs. Amanda Yowell & Abby Yowell

"I like having my mom here so if I have any problems I can just go see her," Abby said. "Sometimes I go and take a nap on her classroom floor." (Rochelle)

Mrs. Mendy Sharp & Seth Sharp

"I don't see my mom very often in the halls, but when I do I always wonder what to do," Seth said. "I feel awkward when I see her." (G Higgins)

FRESHMEN: ready TO BE the small fish ...again

Coming into high school isn't easy. The pressure of navigating a whole new campus isn't a small feat. The halls were filled with questions of where to go and the rustling of schedules being frantically pulled out. Again.

THOUGHTS ON THE FIRST DAY OF SCHOOL?

"I wasn't really nervous about coming into high school because it's just school, and I knew it wouldn't be that bad," Marvin Butler said. "I was just thinking about getting to my classes, and not getting lost in the hallways."

WHAT INTIMIDATED YOU THE MOST?

"I was intimidated because I was coming into a school with seniors," Aniyah Allen said. "But as time went by, they became less intimidating because I got to know them better."

HOW HARD WAS IT TO NAVIGATE THE HALLS?

"I thought navigating the halls was way easier than I was expecting coming into high school," Lizbeth Silva said. "I thought it was even easier than the middle school campus because it wasn't as spread out as what I was used to. I just had to get used to going up stairs."

HOW MANY TIMES DID YOU PULL OUT YOUR SCHEDULE?

"I looked at my schedule so many times during the first week I couldn't even tell you how many times," D'nae Williams said. "Getting to my classes was just habit by the time the second week rolled around."

A group of freshmen bust into lunch to find their seat at the freshman table. "I tried to get there fast just to see where everyone was going to sit, so I could sit by my friends," Emma Sheets said. "I found a seat beside all of my friends so I was happy." [PPasonghong]

Being on varsity is hard enough, but being a freshman on varsity is even more pressure

Hallie Lipham
"It was fun, but I did feel like I was under pressure to be at a higher level of competition with the older girls," she said. [JThomas]

Harleigh O'Neil
"I felt great, young and immature around all the older people since they're very mature," she said. [HKnight]

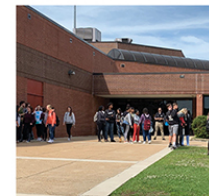

Lexi Snyder
"It was overwhelming but it was fun also because you just get the experience. The only reason I felt overwhelmed was of the expectation was high on me," she said. [Ebeck]

Timia Cooks
"There isn't a junior varsity team, so I had to work even harder to get a spot on varsity. When I found out I was on the team I was so excited, but I was nervous too being a freshman on the team," she said. [Ebeck]

hitch a RIDE

Driving is out of the question for most freshmen, so getting dropped off or picked up is one of very few options

After school wait

The freshmen try to entertain themselves while they wait on their rides. "I'm always the last to get picked up, so when they all leave I sit around and play Clash of Clans," Luke Meyers said. [ORochelle]

Getting out of school as fast as she can, Gracie Owens jumps in a friend's car. "I needed a ride, and I was going to hang out with her later that night," she said. "She offered me a ride." [ORochelle]

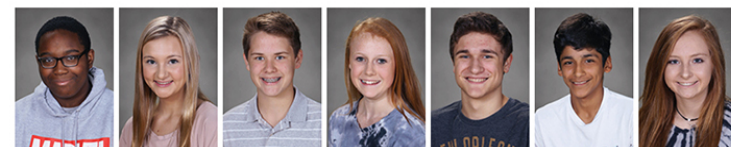

Passing the time

To pass the time, Aniyah Allen scrolls through Instagram waiting for her ride to arrive at the school. "I usually have to wait, so I sit in the air conditioned foyer," she said. "It goes by fast if I'm on my phone or talking to friends." [ORochelle]

Hopping in

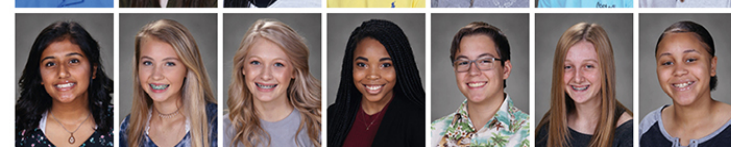

Ready to go, Sarah Johnson has all her stuff as she hops into her dad's truck. "I always try to get out of school as fast as I can," Sarah said. "I don't like to make my dad wait." [ORochelle]

While the camera rolls, Morgan Zymbroy, Maddie Ingram, Britney Hensberger, Clarissa Verduco dance down the stairs in a music video assigned for their dance class. [Charris]

BUST a move

Morgan Zymbroy starts her morning off dancing. Taking Mrs. Tiffany Beck's dance class allowed her to have some fun and release stress before she started her day. Trinity Parks took dance because she gets exercise while doing something she loves—and it didn't hurt that she got her PE credit at the same time. Freshmen had a smaller choice of electives so most got their fine arts and PE credits out of the way.

the FINE ARTS

At some point during the week, freshmen entered the 600 Hall for a little music, art or drama

Doing her project, freshman Hannah Holland sketches out a bug. "I really enjoyed being able to look at something then draw it," Hannah said. "I also thought it was cool to choose my bug." [Ppasonghong]

Right before Halloween, freshman Sarah Johnson designs a wound in Theater I. "When we did our wounds, we got to design whatever we wanted," Sarah said. "My favorite part was deciding what I wanted."

While getting his face mask on, freshman Dalton McDonald works on his art project. "It felt really weird with the mask on," Dalton said. "It was also weird looking in the mirror with it on my face." [Ppasonghong]

Freshman Zach Hughes looks at his finished wound for a make-up project in Theater I. "I was pretty impressed with how it turned out," Zach said. "It looked real, so that was a plus."

MAKNG music

As a member of the Pride in Motion band, Isaac Neuman plays the trombone. At home, he plays the piano. "I've played the piano since I was five. My dad played when he was a child so we always had a piano in the house," he said. "I can figure out songs by ear and it's not as loud as a trombone." [KDavis]

Wilson Chang started playing the tuba for a very good reason. "I play the tuba because the band didn't have any more tubas so they needed me," he said. "I'm also trying to play the piano but I'm not that good so far." [KDavis]

BE artsy

Freshman took home many awards in different competitions.

ANN ELISE LINDSEY

As a freshman, Ann Elise Lindsey won a Silver Key in the Scholastic Art and Writing national competition. "I guess I'm in pretty good and unexpected because I didn't think I would win but I felt good," she said. [ahiggins]

KAYLEE SEXSON

Kaylee Sexson was chosen for the National Art Honor Society exhibition, there were only 70 students selected in the nation. "I feel pretty excited. I thought it was really cool. It was pretty neat being chosen in freshman year," she said. [ahiggins]

ISABELLE HACKELMAN

Isabelle Hackelman was chosen to compete in the Celebrate Art National Competition. "I was really shocked when they told me that I was chosen for the competition," she said. [ahiggins]

LESLIE REYES

Leslie Reyes was also chosen to compete in the Celebrate Art National Competition. "First, I was really surprised about it because I mean I didn't think the work was really good. But I was the part of the work that I did, so I guess I felt good," Leslie said.

down to the CORE

When it came to the basics and the teachers who taught them, freshmen got a few tips from upper classmen

MR. BALDWIN

Sophomores always warn freshmen like Joshua James about Mr. Baldwin's map quizzes and tests, especially the one over Africa.

MRS. DICKESON

In Mrs. Holly Dickeson's class, freshmen get lots of grammar practice to get them ready for the English I EOC test. Grade Carr gets some encouragement from Mrs. Dickeson before the test.

MRS. HAIDET

Geometry is one of those classes where you either get it or you don't. Mrs. Barb Haidet teaches students like Will Estes and Nathan Hutcheson with visuals like the end of the year kite project.

MRS. STRAWN

Dissecting pig fetuses doesn't sound fun until Mrs. Shelby Strawn explains it in freshman biology class.

[fill in the blank]

"Going to summer band as a freshman wasn't that scary," Kayce Tuberville said. "It was actually pretty fun, but I enjoy forward marching over backward marching because I'm so short it's hard to backward march."

// The Hawk Pleasant Grove High School Texarkana, Texas

BEFORE starting a dissection lab, biology teacher Shelby Strawn explains the process to Andrew Murphy (8) and Trevor Hargrave (9). (G Higgins)

BE the teacher

Q: What does it mean to be a teacher?

TIM BALDWIN [History]: "To be a teacher it means a loss of hair and brain cells."

HOLLY DICKESON [English]: "Being a teacher means being able to effect change in a real way where you can see the results and live out your passion in a meaningful context."

SAMANTHA DURHAM [Math]: "To be a teacher it means that you are constantly giving everything you have to help a student. At the same time you are trying to encourage the student to be responsible for their own learning. It's kind of a balancing act of giving your best, but also demanding the best from your student."

LESLIE ABSTON [History]: "It means that I have over a hundred kids serving as a captive audience everyday. Being a teacher means that I get to do what I love everyday and spread the wonderful joys and excitement of world history to all my students."

STEPHANIE SCOTT [Health Science]: "For me, it has a bit of a different meaning. See I didn't go to school to be a teacher, I just kind of ended up teaching and I love it. Luckily I'm a teacher in a career field, which means for the most part, the students in my class are interested in my career field. It is easier to teach when students are invested in what knowledge I have to share. Teaching in the medical field is cool because we get to do a lot of hands on stuff. I love when a student finds their love for the medical field through my class."

BE together

Teachers often spend more time with their students and athletes than their own children so spending quality time with their own kids at school functions is a bonus.

Coach Clint Fuller

"It is really special for my kids to be involved. It is part of the reason we moved out to Pleasant Grove. To be a part of a community that supports athletics and to be able to have my children around is an awesome thing." [CJoyce]

Coach Riley Fincher

"It is exciting when my kids are out there, either Lauren or my son, just to have them associated with our school. Our whole coaching staff—all of our kids—are so close to each other and to have them experience that is amazing." [G Higgins]

Mrs. Holly Dickson

"I love all of the opportunities we have of teachers who work here being able to involve their kids at the school even at young ages. I like to bring my kids to the pep rallies and send off. They love seeing the older kids and I think it builds a great sense of community." [submitted]

DRESSED for SUCCESS

Students aren't the only ones who change their wardrobe for dress up days

Digging through storage boxes and old clothes boxes, teachers always find the most cheapest and most creative takes on dress up days. From Christmas to spirit weeks, there was always a new outfit to be found.

"I like to dress up because I think it encourages the kids to dress up and participate and it's always more fun if you participate, than if you just sit back and watch," Mrs. Horton said.

But they didn't just dress up to break up their everyday attire. They did it to show their students that they aren't the only ones who can have fun.

"I enjoy dressing up, I think it's fun and I think it brings a lot of spirit to the school. If we expect the kids to dress up, then I think the teachers need to play a part too," said Mrs. Clark.

From western, super hero, jersey, twin, and hawk gear, there was no end to the different combination that could be found in the hallways. It added not only color but spirit to the halls throughout the months.

"I always think dress up days are super fun, and it just creates a fun atmosphere in the halls. I like to have school spirit. I have always had school spirit, even when I was a student. I think the kids like it when teachers dress up. It really creates an energetic environment for the students," Mrs. Tori Depriest said.

Mrs. Summer Gibson didn't just dress up in the name of spirit. She wanted to end up on the winner's podium.

"I dress up for two reasons: school spirit is number one, and number two, my three daughters and I have a competition. We like to see who can be in the yearbook the most, and I like to win. I am also very competitive and if I dress up my chances of winning are better," she said.

All teachers have different reasons for dressing up, but they all come together to brighten up the school.

MRS. MCINNIS

Math teacher Michelle McInnis didn't have any windows in her classroom, so she made a "window" with her husband's help. "I got tired of looking at the wall," Mrs. McInnis said. "I chose the beach because it's so relaxing. I also alternate pictures throughout the seasons."

MRS. MARTINDALE

Science teacher Mrs. Martindale always had a fragrant smell flowing from her classroom. "They make my room smell homey. I am very seasonal. I love any-thing fall, and for the spring I like the more fruity scents," she said. [G Higgins]

MRS. STRAWN

Science teacher Shelby Strawn had a class pet, however, a tarantula wasn't a typical class pet. "At the beginning of the year Winston was definitely the first thing students noticed in my classroom, but now they have gotten used to him," she said. [G Higgins]

1. IN THE holiday spirit after decorating their doors, Mrs. Tiffany Horton, Mrs. Jennifer Gibson, and Coach Gina Clark dress up in their Christmas gear. "Christmas week is always my favorite time to dress up especially when I coordinate with the other teachers." [G Higgins] 2. READY for a howdown, Mrs. Summer Gibson and Mrs. Tori Depriest break out their cowboy boots for homecoming week. "Dressing up creates a really energetic and fun environment for the students," Mrs. Depriest said. [T Beck] 3. DRESSING for Disney, Mrs. Karen Carpenter, the counseling staff, and the principals dress like the cast for Winnie the Pooh and Mickey Mouse for homecoming week. "I enjoy being a part of school spirit. It's always nice to be a part of something," Mrs. Carpenter said. [T Beck] 4. BREAKING out his fake beard, Mr. John Strunc dresses like Santa Claus. "I dress up because it is fun and its something to do. It breaks up the monotony and the kids enjoy it," Mr. Strunc said. [P Pinson]

You are BRAVER than you believe. STRONGER than you feel. SMARTER than you think and LOVED more than you know. We love you!
 Mom & Calvin,
 Dad & Nancy, Savannah,
 Camron, Leah, & Shelby.

DEVON HOEHN

C.J. RATELIFF

We are so proud of all the accomplishments that you have achieved and know that there are great things in your future. Trust in God to guide you in the path that is meant for you and you will go far. Always do what is right, stay humble and kind!

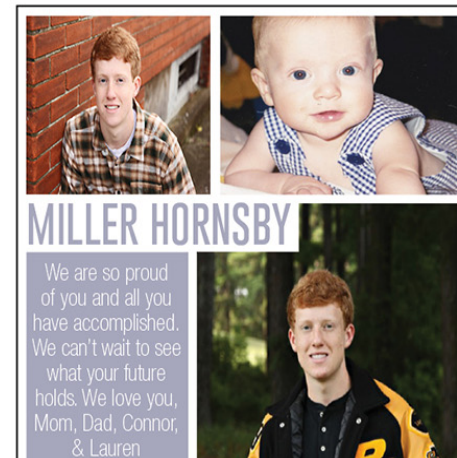

Love you always,
 Mom, Dad, Cameron, Grandma & Aunt Ann

AVERY MATTHEWS

Avery, you have big dreams for your future. We have big dreams for you too, but our biggest dream is that your life is full of love, laughter, and happiness. We are so very proud of the young lady you've become. We love you!

Dad, Mom & Parker

MILLER HORNSBY

We are so proud of you and all you have accomplished. We can't wait to see what your future holds. We love you, Mom, Dad, Connor, & Lauren

MARY & LORA

A good friend knows all your best stories,
 A BEST friend has lived them with you!

Love,
 Your Families

PARKER TWISDALE

The moment you came into this world it became a better place! Hold on to Proverbs 3:5-6

"Trust in the Lord with all your heart and lean not on your own understanding. In all your ways acknowledge Him and He will direct your path."

Love you most!
 Dad, Mom, Hudson, Grandpa,

BE

IT CONTINUES FROM HERE.

BE. A verb. To identify with.

BE has defined whatever you've wanted it to. And we've watched and learned.

You did more than expected. And you filled in more blanks than you thought possible. You spent extra time in Ms. Scott's class practicing phlebotomy for your certification. You set your alarms for 5 a.m. so you could run your Interact route on Fridays. And you sweated in the parking lot during summer band practice to make sure the show was ready to go.

And for now it's over. We are leaving you on your own. It's time to see what all else you can do while you Fill in Your Blank. While you decide what else you want to BE.

1. TWISTING a broom handle above her head, Caitlyn Dyer (10) races against her classmates to see the effect of gravity during a lab in Ms. Sara Martindale's IPC class. "We were trying to see who could twist the broom fast enough to get the bottle to the top and see what our times were," she said. "By the end, it began to hurt a bit." [SLam] 2. SURROUNDED by the Seven Dwarfs, Homecoming Princess Dawson Hatfield (12) gets a ride into the gym with her nephew on her pep rally parade float. "Even though he was probably looked scared, he was really just worried about getting a sucker at the end of the pep rally if he acted good," Dawson said. "He is my favorite person and because all the attention was on him, I felt much better about going out in front of everyone." [SLam]

1. ON STAGE in the PAC, Daphne Sexson (10) performs the song "Journey to the Past" from the movie Anastasia at the annual Follies talent show. "I enjoy singing the song because it is more of an opera song and it's the right pitch," she said. [HKnight] 2. THING 1, Alana Award (12), Claire Gibson (10) and Becky Leary (12) sit waiting for the PAC to fill up for their Seussical the Musical performance. "Our warm-ups before shows get the whole cast ready to go on stage and help us get rid of all our pre-show nerves," Alana said. "They're very important for us so we can put on a good show." [KBashyal]

SPRINTING through the run-out tunnel carrying his flag, Keaton Russo (12) leads the football players onto the field before the round 3 game against Gilmer. The flag runners had lots of opportunities to run the flags as the Hawks ran up 56 points over the Buckeyes in a game that didn't end until after midnight because of two rain delays. [GPickelman]

BE

You came to the end of your blank. Period. For now. We've seen you painting props until 10 at night, successfully building an egg drop project, and being front and center for the Follies. You impressed us, even learned a thing or two.

But don't think you're done. As soon as you fill in your blank, there's another one waiting. So we'll be there when you pack for college, become a world traveler, or even the class president. We'll be waiting as you...

Involved: Kara Richardson (9)
"I went to Fields of Faith with Sila Forand Ryan Leach. I went to hear more about Jesus and just to hear people's stories and testimonies."

The Cheerleader: Lexi Snyder (9)
"We do a bunch of stuff the varsity team doesn't want to do, but the best part is getting to cheer on the sidelines."

The Signee: James Wiggins (12)
"I was so in awe that in my first musical production I was one of the lead vocalists but it was really funny because my character was the complete opposite of how I really am"

Interviewed: Noni Hilley (12)
"I plan on pursuing sports medicine as a career, and the hands on experience has gotten me so many scholarships and offers from potential colleges."

The Man: Spencer Richardson (10)
"I got the suit at the clearance section at Target during cross country season. I wore it before meets as a gimmick. Thought I might as well me the friendly neighborhood Spiderman."
