SPOTLIGHT

Hair Identity

By Lydia Gafford & Annie Jones

THE PRICE OF BEAUTY

In 2013,avers averaged 85 $15,000, and hair products, according to Quest magazine. Many of the women who have spent years shopping for these products to achieve a certain look are often left out in anti-chromatic displays. Not to mention, hair care products are generally more expensive.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT

Dayton Voorhees started growing his hair long in second grade when his parent's friends asked him to. At that time, male students were required to get their hair cut until one day he decided “this is a stupid rule” and sent it off to the barbershop.

THE ROOT OF THE PROBLEM

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

ADONI ROSS

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

THE PRICE OF BEAUTY

In 2013,avers averaged 85 $15,000, and hair products, according to Quest magazine. Many of the women who have spent years shopping for these products to achieve a certain look are often left out in anti-chromatic displays. Not to mention, hair care products are generally more expensive.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT

Dayton Voorhees started growing his hair long in second grade when his parent’s friends asked him to. At that time, male students were required to get their hair cut until one day he decided “this is a stupid rule” and sent it off to the barbershop.

THE ROOT OF THE PROBLEM

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

ADONI ROSS

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

THE PRICE OF BEAUTY

In 2013,avers averaged 85 $15,000, and hair products, according to Quest magazine. Many of the women who have spent years shopping for these products to achieve a certain look are often left out in anti-chromatic displays. Not to mention, hair care products are generally more expensive.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT

Dayton Voorhees started growing his hair long in second grade when his parent’s friends asked him to. At that time, male students were required to get their hair cut until one day he decided “this is a stupid rule” and sent it off to the barbershop.

THE ROOT OF THE PROBLEM

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

ADONI ROSS

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

THE PRICE OF BEAUTY

In 2013,avers averaged 85 $15,000, and hair products, according to Quest magazine. Many of the women who have spent years shopping for these products to achieve a certain look are often left out in anti-chromatic displays. Not to mention, hair care products are generally more expensive.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT

Dayton Voorhees started growing his hair long in second grade when his parent’s friends asked him to. At that time, male students were required to get their hair cut until one day he decided “this is a stupid rule” and sent it off to the barbershop.

THE ROOT OF THE PROBLEM

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

ADONI ROSS

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

THE PRICE OF BEAUTY

In 2013,avers averaged 85 $15,000, and hair products, according to Quest magazine. Many of the women who have spent years shopping for these products to achieve a certain look are often left out in anti-chromatic displays. Not to mention, hair care products are generally more expensive.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT

Dayton Voorhees started growing his hair long in second grade when his parent’s friends asked him to. At that time, male students were required to get their hair cut until one day he decided “this is a stupid rule” and sent it off to the barbershop.

THE ROOT OF THE PROBLEM

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

ADONI ROSS

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

THE PRICE OF BEAUTY

In 2013,avers averaged 85 $15,000, and hair products, according to Quest magazine. Many of the women who have spent years shopping for these products to achieve a certain look are often left out in anti-chromatic displays. Not to mention, hair care products are generally more expensive.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT

Dayton Voorhees started growing his hair long in second grade when his parent’s friends asked him to. At that time, male students were required to get their hair cut until one day he decided “this is a stupid rule” and sent it off to the barbershop.

THE ROOT OF THE PROBLEM

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

ADONI ROSS

“Every journey transitioning from relaxed to natural hair is breakable. “We’re in it for the health of the natural hair,” she said. “I was getting too attached to my hair as it was. I felt like I needed to change it.”

“Even people with looser curls have straightened them,” said Bauer. “You don’t need to change your hair to make it a certain way is not the point.”

Amber Ross says that her great-grandmother used to complain that natural hair made, “You don’t need to change it.”

THE PRICE OF BEAUTY

In 2013,avers averaged 85 $15,000, and hair products, according to Quest magazine. Many of the women who have spent years shopping for these products to achieve a certain look are often left out in anti-chromatic displays. Not to mention, hair care products are generally more expensive.