

The Daily Iowan

December 2, 2021

Good morning, Hawkeyes!

We're one day closer to the weekend and the Hawkeyes' trip to Indianapolis for the Big Ten Championship football game. Check our website for stories about ticket sales and a recap of a legislative forum we hosted last night.

Read more of our content from news, sports, arts, and more at dailyiowan.com.

News

Student season ticket holders received an email in September inviting them to request a ticket to the 2021 Big Ten Championship football game by Nov. 1. Over 2,000 tickets were reserved, and now students will receive tickets on Thursday for the game Saturday in Indianapolis.

Share thoughts, win money.

We're conducting research on behalf of a consortium of college newspapers to better understand how students use software in college. It's quick, interesting, and you'll be entered to win a $75 Amazon gift card.

Take Survey →

Four Johnson County legislators said they felt public education was under attack by recent bills and actions in the state Legislature during a forum hosted by The Daily Iowan on Wednesday. The upcoming legislative session will be the last for Sen. Joe Bolkcom and Rep. Mary Mascher before they retire, and the last for Rep. Christina Bohannon ahead of her run for U.S. Congress.

South East Junior High students are participating in restorative circles and community building to help resolve improper after-school behavior and working with staff to ensure sustained change.

Sports

Iowa women's basketball is back in action on Thursday against Duke after a two-week long pause for COVID-19. Iowa head coach Lisa Bluder told reporters on Wednesday that she doesn't know how many athletes and staff are vaccinated and did not specify how many people in the program were affected by the outbreak.

Arts

The Daily Iowan reviews House of Gucci, a recent film based on the Gucci family and the power struggle within. The two-and-a-half-hour film falls short in terms of pacing, but the acting, ambiance, and story carry it to enjoyability.

What We're Reading:

Potential collapse of Roe shakes up political landscape: The volatile issue of abortion catapulted to the center of the political debate Wednesday after the Supreme Court signaled it would uphold a law undermining Roe v. Wade, creating the potential for the polarizing matter to reshape the electoral battlefield. (Washington Post)

First U.S. Omicron Case Is California Patient: The first known case of the Omicron variant in the U.S. was identified in a San Francisco resident who recently returned from South Africa, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and California health officials said. (Wall Street Journal)

Tiffany O'Donnell defeats Amara Andrews to win Cedar Rapids mayoral race : Voters in Iowa's second-largest city Tuesday elected Women Lead Change Chief Executive Officer Tiffany O'Donnell to lead change as the next mayor of Cedar Rapids, handily defeating TrueNorth employee Amara Andrews in a runoff. (The Gazette)

